Courtroom Given Complete Airing

Business was at a standstill in circuit court yesterday, while department one, scene of the Kyle murder trial, was given a thorough airing following fumigation after the trial. A conglomeration of articles from the Kyle home, including bed and bed clothing, was incentive for the fumigation. Both departments of court will swing into action Monday again, with the Mary L. Skiff estate case in department two. In department one, Judge McMahan will preside over trial of the $7700 damage action brought by Pearl Enslay against the Southern Pacific railway and its conductor, C. W. Williams.

In the damage suit, based on an accident at the Mission street crossing October 31 last, plaintiff alleges the train backed into the intersection so rear of the train struck the car, with resultant injury to plaintiff, who contends the train was no signal from the rear.

The defendant claims, in part, that the plaintiff's car was not under proper control so a stop could be made at the crossing, and that two employees of the train swung lanterns and signaled to the approaching car, and also shouted warnings.

Prune Deal Is Found Popular

Sign-Up Around Keizer Is Practically 100 Per Cent, Reported

Practically a hundred per cent sign-up for the proposed new prune deal was given in the Keizer district at a meeting of growers there Thursday night, leaders report. Under the proposed plan, a cooperative marketing organization will be set up for orderly sale of prunes.

A good sized crowd attended the session, held at the schoolhouse, with every grower but two present signing the contracts. These two members both belonging to an established prune exchange.

Growers in the various prune districts over the state are carrying through the work of getting contracts signed, and are meeting with good results, A. M. Chapman, administrator of the old prune control board which the new set-up will replace, stated yesterday.

After signing up, an accurate check on the number of signatures to date is not available, inasmuch as the contracts are held in the banks at the various growing centers. A large percentage of the growers in Linn, Lane, Douglas, Clackamas, Polk, Washington and Marion county are reported to have signed.

The third week in April will tell definitely whether or not the new organization, to be known also as the Oregon prune control board, will function or whether the prune industry will go back to the old basis, Chapman says. Elections have been set for that week in each of the seven districts, and the state will be divided under the proposed organization. Each district will elect two directors to the state executive committee of 14.

Disappearance of L. E. Neet, chief deputy in the county tax collecting department prior to February 22 when he dropped from sight, was still as much of a mystery as ever last night, Sheriff A. C. Burk said.

Bert Howe spent yesterday searching on the Willamette, drifting from Salem down to Wheatland, with no trace. This investigation was predicated upon possibility of suicide. Howe reported that he found a cow, three dead dogs, two
