China Loser If Neighbors War

Sees Japanese, Russians Setting Stage, Fears Battlefield Role

By C. Y. McDANIEL
NANKING—(AP)—China would gain little and possibly lose more than she has during the last five years should the never-smooth course of events in northeastern Asia move toward the large-scale clash which many foresee as the inevitable climax of four decades of Russo-Japanese enmity and conflicting ambitions.

This is the consensus of mature Chinese official opinion which decries the popular Chinese belief that in a war between Russia and Japan lies China's hope of regaining what she has lost in territory and international prestige.

Japan Setting Stage
Nanking officialdom's fear that China would be the loser, no matter which way the fortunes of war turned, is based upon Japan's evident intention of setting the stage of war as far as possible from the Japanese islands and as near as possible to the heart of the great expanse which extends across Europe and Asia.

By taking Manchuria and Jehol, and extending her economic and military control westward across north China and Inner Mongolia, Japan is seen by Nanking as having commenced her attempts to stage manage the war drama which Tokyo's military actors have been preparing since the close of the curtain-raising Russo-Japanese conflict of 1904-05.

Scouting persistent reports that Nanking has reached a mutual assistance agreement with Moscow in case of war with Japan, civil and military officials at the Chinese capital explain that by joining hands with Russia, China would lay her long coastline and navigable rivers open to Japanese attack and occupation before a single shot would be fired along the Siberian border.

Wrong in Any Case
Some Chinese politico-military strategists are known to advocate open and active support of Japan against Russia. But Chinese statesmen cannot but picture China's sad lot as an ally of a defeated Japan.

Soviet Russia has repeatedly disavowed any territorial ambition in Asia, but China's experience as the vanquished party in foreign wars during the last century has left her leaders reluctant to pursue any course which might result in China having to throw herself upon the mercy of any victor.

"We are resting precariously on the horns of a dilemma. Whatever we do will be wrong," said that, in the words of one of Nanking's best informed officials, is why China gives the impression that she is doing nothing to better her lot.

Think Fatal Riot Was Preventable

ASTORIA, Ore., March 26—(AP)—The Clatsop county grand jury, in its report today, said it "believed" the fatal labor riot at Seaside March 7 "could have been averted had the sheriff been present at the Crown-Willamette camp with additional help when he was notified this raid was to take place."

The jury indicted 37 persons in connection with the case, all but two of whom are in jail. District Attorney Willis West said the store was strewn with goods but none was taken.

Burglars Destructive

ALBANY, Ore., March 26—(AP)—Police reported today robbers at a grocery store here appeared more interested in creating havoc than in stealing merchandise. The store was strewn with goods but none was taken.

Two men were killed at the Crown-Willamette camp in a clash between members of the International Wood Sulphite Union, with which employees of the camp were affiliated, and the Sawmill and Timber Workers' union. The riot culminated a prolonged jurisdictional dispute.

Sheriff J. V. Burns said tonight he had not seen the grand jury report and had no statement to make.
