to one grant a year. Willard Walter, assistant executive secretary of the Young Democratic organization at Washington, D. C., addressed the convention briefly late yesterday.

Telling of a conference he recently attended in the east with James Farley, postmaster-general, Walter said Farley insisted that the country be organized for Roosevelt down to the smallest precinct.

"I tell you the young democrats are taking the lead in this organization work," Walter declared. "In many states they are controlling elections. It was the young democratic organization which cleaned up the $25,000 deficit in the party this year. That's an accomplishment which shows our merit. The young men and women who got out and did the work are to be rewarded. I can tell you right now that we're not going to build any machine without jobs."

Explained by Burt Prior to the time the convention opened there were rumors that U. S. Burt, president, was packing committees with persons favorable to his candidacy for the party's nomination for state treasurer and opposed to Jack Allen of Pendleton, who also seeks the democratic nomination for that post. Burt denied that there was any truth in the report. He said he had chosen committees with the view of disturbing the work and with no intent whatever to further his own candidacy. Burt said he had not decided to run for the treasurer's office until this spring and at that time he decided it would be unwise to quit the Young Democratic organization when the state convention here was imminent.

The convention will hold a morning and afternoon session today at the Marion hotel followed by a banquet. Governor Ben Ross who was to come here from Portland, was the featured speaker, wired last night that he was sending M. Reese Hatabaugh, chairman of the Idaho public utilities commission, to take his place. Governor Ross was involved Wednesday night in an automobile accident in which a pedestrian lost his life. The featured address this morning will be by Virgil Langtry of Bend.

Last night the convention delegates were entertained by a play, "The New Deal vs. the Old Deal" written by Mary Greiner Kelly. Dancing followed the play. Today 200 young men and women from all parts of the state are expected to be in attendance. Nearly 100 had registered late yesterday afternoon.

Free clinics multiply

Thirteen important cities now have in operation a system of hospital insurance which is winning increasing popularity. In New York alone more than 65,000 are enrolled in the system, each one paying $10 a year, a fee which entitles them to 21 days of bed, board and treatment at any one of the 147 affiliated hospitals in case of sickness. While the system has obvious advantages, it fails, in the opinion of Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr., new surgeon general of United States public health service, to meet the financial problems of the modern doctor. Dr. Parran advocates an extension of federal service in the medical field, leaving active management of the program to the physicians. He would provide free drugs and treatment for all who could not pay, the cost to be borne by the government, but would continue private practice wherever possible.

Concrete Meeting Tests, Announced

Concrete now going into the new senior high school building here is without exception meeting city building code requirements and some batches are being found to be more than twice as strong as required, a brief survey of test reports at the school superintendent's office yesterday showed. All tests of concrete poured since the original mixing specifications were revised in late February have exceeded a testing strength of 1500 pounds per square inch, the minimum permitted under the city code.

In most cases test reports are in excess of 2000 pounds per square inch. Test cylinders placed in the highway department press this week registered 2470, 3935, 3320 and 3245 pounds strength. Additional reinforcing steel has been placed over the early-laid concrete which failed to meet the city standards. The reinforcing was held satisfactory by the building inspector.

Free Wheatland Ferry Is Sought

Proponents of a free ferry on the Willamette river at Wheatland are to have a hearing before the Marion county court Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. Clyde LaFollette made arrangements for the meeting.

Cost of the operation of the ferry is estimated at $1500 and would be borne by both counties. A small number of supporters for the ferry are said to expect trouble in getting the approval of their court and have requested the appointment of the Marion group before placing the matter before their representatives.

Democrat candidates for the office of constable in the Salem district left the field to the republican aspirants at the Credit association luncheon yesterday noon, with none of the three democrats on the ballot appearing to speak a word to the voters. Mild Attacks of Smallpox Listed

Two more cases of smallpox here were reported yesterday by Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer. The patients are the father and mother of two school children who suffered mild attacks of the same disease recently.

"Due to the large number of Salem people who have been vaccinated, there is little danger of a smallpox epidemic breaking out," Dr. Douglas said. "We have been vaccinating all persons who were in contact with the two latest cases."

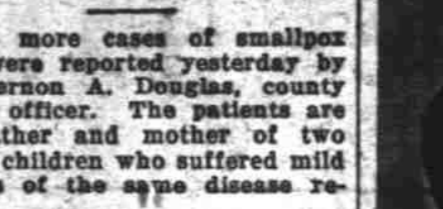

A daughter in this family, attending Parrish junior high school was the first member to fall victim to smallpox. The case was not diagnosed immediately as that disease. Dr. Douglas said a large scale vaccination clinic had immediately been held at her school. As a precaution against further cases, health nurses are attempting to check up on each child in school who has not been vaccinated.
