

Irate Fans Invade Ring When Meanie Lipscomb Outdoes Self

Need For Riot Squad Averted

Action in Tying Bennett Up in Ropes Resented and Chairs Waved

They nearly had to call the riot squad at the armory last night when Jack Lipscomb incited the fans to chair-wielding antics but with the help of Officer Putnam and a few Legionnaires they subsided to a muttering, booing mob.

The fans don't like most anything the rascally Lipscomb does. They particularly didn't like the way he got George Bennett former Oklahoma university matinee, tangled up in the ropes so that he could sock him senseless.

They didn't do anything about it until Referee Harry Elliott tried to interfere and got knocked to the canvas by the flailing fists of Mr. Lipscomb.

Lipscomb returned to his job on the helpless Bennett. Kingsiders Attack in Solid Phalanx

Then the fireworks started. The stout-hearted fans who buy the ringside seats surged forward as one man, over the ropes and into the ring. One prominent business man was advancing on Lipscomb with an iron chair grasped firmly in his two hands and a humanitarian glint in his eye.

Harry Elliott, acting with his usual quick-witted common sense, saved Lipscomb from a horrible death by quickly arising from the mat and driving Lipscomb before him to the opposite corner of the ring.

By this time there were at least a dozen anti-Lipscomb spectators in the ring as well as Officer Putnam of the Salem police, Harry Platt and several Legionnaires. Several of the spectators advanced menacingly on Lipscomb but the latter had the protection of the law and went unharmed.

Dave Him to Emerge After the ring was cleared and the groaning Bennett, suffering from an injured larynx, carried to the dressing rooms the fans stood around the ring during Lipscomb's come out. He did finally but only after the crowd's initial anger had subsided, and with full protection.

Bennett was awarded the deciding fall on a foul after the two had broken even on the first two. Buck Lawson, Tennessee, took two out of three falls from Jean La Belle in the semi-final.

Walter Tinkitt Achlu, Dayton, and Bobbie Burns, West Palm Beach, Florida, wrestled cleanly for a half hour to a draw.

The Goose Still Hangs High

By BURNLEY

—OUT TO SET A NEW MARK BY PLAYING IN HIS 4TH STRAIGHT WORLD SERIES.

THAT grand old bird with the elongated beak, "Geese" Goslin, the Goose from Detroit, is one of the great veterans of modern baseball. Goslin has been in the big show for nearly a decade and a half, yet major league moundsmen will tell you that they would rather face almost any other batter than the Goose in the pinches.

For it seems that the guy with the Durante schnozzola has always possessed the happy faculty of coming through in the clutch, which, translated from the baseballese, means that he is dangerous under pressure, and is most likely to hit when a hit is most needed.

No better demonstration of the Goose's talents as a money player could be wished for than his game-winning bingle in the ninth inning of the final game in last year's world series. Just when a hit was needed to put the series on dry ice for the Tigers, Goslin was the man to come through with the blow that made him the series hero.

The fiery old guy with the prominent proboscis has been counted out by the wisecracks at the start of each of the past couple of seasons, but though he has slowed up considerably, and is not the consistent clutch of old, the Goose's contagious fighting spirit and ability to hit in the pinches makes him of more value to the team than the younger men who try to out him from his regular outfield post.

Goslin is now determined to set a new mark by playing in his fourth straight world series, and it is close to an even money bet that he'll do that very thing.

Bearcats and Pilots Clash

Erickson Slated For Job on Mound in Vaughn Street Contest

With George Erickson, last year "Spec" Keene's iron man pitcher, slated for mound duty the Bearcat baseball team will meet the Portland university Pilots on the Vaughn street grounds in Portland in the first collegiate game ever played at the home park of the Portland Beavers. The game is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock.

It will be the third start of the season for Erickson, the hurler who fame last year by pitching 18 hitless innings in the championship series with Whitman. Erickson this year won a game from Oregon State and was relieved in the third game against Oregon after giving the Webbet a commanding lead.

Erickson is said to be a "hot-weather" pitcher and should be at his best tomorrow with the weatherman predicting a hot and sultry day.

Hatch to Oppose
Bill Hatch, considered a major league prospect, will be on the mound for the Pilots. Lucy Zener, a right hander, will be held in reserve. The Bearcats beat the Pilots 6 to 1 in a previous game with Jim Carlin, a freshman, pitching for Portland.

Keene, with the crucial conference series with C. P. S. in view, has been drilling the Bearcats steadily in defensive work this week. The Logger batting order lists a powerful array of lousy hitters. The Bearcats, hitting at a .300 clip, are not so bad with the sticks themselves.

Today's game has been billed as the second contest of a series to decide the unofficial collegiate baseball championship of Oregon. If the Bearcats win they can lay claim to the mythical crown.
