Badminton — II

Badminton is a net and racket game, the principles being similar to tennis, but rules and equipment somewhat different. It is a game especially adapted for indoors but can be played outdoors. The net is five feet high and the shuttlecock or "bird" is hit back and forth in the air and must not hit the ground. It is a game that appeals to all ages and to both sexes and takes only a few swings at the bird to become an enthusiast. The game is an active one that demands vitality, skill, and coordination, however, is a game that a lot of fun learning and the more you play the better you like it.

Equipment

The rackets are of light weight, and similar in shape to a tennis racket, but not nearly so sturdy. The shuttlecock or bird is made of 14 or 15 carefully steamed, exact-matched feathers about 2 1/2 inches long. These feathers are bound with silk and set into a cork base, which is covered with white kid. The net is made of white mesh cord, with one inch squares, and from 17 to 24 feet long.

The Court

The combination "singles" and "doubles" court is the most economical and practical, as both are the same length, and the doubles is a little wider. The court for doubles is 44 feet long and 20 feet wide, for singles it is the same length and 17 feet wide. The service court for doubles is 15 1/2 feet long, and 8 1/2 feet wide. The service court for singles is 13 feet long, and 10 feet wide. The service courts are 4 1/2 feet from the net, and upon service the bird must cross the net and travel into the other court which is 6 1/2 feet from net.

Red Sox Mound Menace

By BURNLEY

MULTI-MILLIONAIRE Yawkey's expensive Boston Red Sox are threatening to prove that pennants can be bought this season, if you can spare a mere million bucks to buy playing talent.

Cramer, Foxx, Rick Ferrell and several other of Beantown's high-priced stars are doing very well indeed. Joe Cronin, who cost more than any other player in history, seems to be making good as a manager even if he hasn't justified his fabulous price tag during his sporadic appearances on the field of action.

However, the two guys that are really responsible for the rise of the Red Sox are those maverick moundmen, Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove and Wesley Ferrell. Grove, acquired from Philadelphia in return for approximately 100 grand in coin of the realm, was no bargain in his first year at Boston. That was in '34, and Lefty developed a kink in his left arm that made him practically useless all season. Last year he came back in great style, leading the league in earned run effectiveness.

Salem Volleyball Team on Par With Best, Jerry Owens' Verdict When He Views National Tournament Contests

EDITOR'S NOTE
The writer of this article, Jerry Owens, had 12 years experience as a volleyball player in Portland during which the team on which he played was nine northwest champions. For three years he played with the Salem Y.M.C.A. during which the team here won three northwest championships. On a trip east to a meeting of the board of directors of the national American Legion monthly, Mr. Owens stopped at Davenport, Iowa, to see the national volleyball championship and here are his impressions.

By JERROLD OWEN
It is particularly unfortunate that the northwest champion volleyball team produced by the Salem Y.M.C.A. this season was not able to finance a trip back to the national matches at Davenport, Iowa, held early this month, for the Salem team would have ranked high in the competition and had an even break for national honors.

The national tournament is staged under conditions and rules very similar to the northwest and Pacific coast championships in which I have participated. The style of play is not unlike that developed in the Pacific northwest. The "block", developed to a high point of efficiency by Portland and Salem in years past and locally treated with less respect locally is used by every national team of prominence. Houston, Texas, three time national champion, uses single or double block on nearly every defensive play at the net. Pasadena, Cal., which scored blocking in coast championship games in the past, features a three-man defensive block with considerable success.

The defeat was a bitter disappointment to the Cubs in general and Lonnie Warneke in particular. Costillo Wins Over Lipscomb

Wins Deciding Fall While Referee Is "Out" But It All Ends Well

Pascual Costillo, fiery Spanish grappler from Los Angeles, returned to the army last night and proceeded to give the villainous Jack Lipscomb a taste of the medicine he has been dealing out to his victims.

Costillo won the last two falls from the Indiana ruffian but nearly cheated himself out of the deciding one. Temporarily in a mental fog after twisting his own neck up in the ropes, Costillo swung on Referee Elliott, knocking him out for a moment or two, long enough for Costillo to pin Lipscomb with a body press.

Pats Wrong Back
By the time Elliott had come to, however, Lipscomb was on top and Elliott patted his back, signifying a win, but Lipscomb couldn't restrain a few odd kicks to the body of the prone Spaniard and Elliott reversed the decision.

He then proceeded to rough up Lipscomb, paying particular attention to that gentleman's still sore "collarbone" area.

George Bennett, the former Oklahoma collegian, took two out of three falls from Buck Lawson of Tennessee in a fast and clean match.

Thunderbolt Pete, newcomer from New Mexico, was awarded a decision over Danny McShain, Hollywood, on a foul after each had one fall in the opener. McShain's violation of wrestling ethics, if there are any, was in kicking Thunderbolt into submission. Elliott subdued McShain with a series of sonnenbergs and awarded the match to the Indian.

If he does not, there is always danger that some other form of government from a democrat will be tried in the United States, the secretary of state averred.

Mr. Snell outlined the many duties of his office. In addition to the handling of all motor vehicle licensing, the collection of all gasoline taxes and the supervision of all state accounting and the approval of claims against the state, the secretary of state is a member of 11 state boards.

Duties Are Varied
Major of these commissions is that of the board of control with supervisory power over all state institutions. This board acts as the administrative agency of government and aside from the time the legislature is in session, can be considered the state department charged with most responsibility, Snell pointed out.

Mr. Snell outlined the work of other state commissions of which the secretary of state is a member. He said the state land board had adopted policy of handling collection of its loaned funds and sale of its property through agencies in each of 36 counties. The veterans' commission, with $16,000,000 in loans and $4,500,000 in property, is one of the largest business institutions in the state, he said.
