Case Dismissed—The case of the First Christian church of Turner against the Turner Memorial home was dismissed yesterday in circuit court when Judge Arlie Walker, called in to hear the case, ruled that Keyes and Page and W. W. McKinney had no authority to appear in the case to determine who should act as trustee of the Cornelia Davis estate. A stipulation agreeing to the dismissal was filed by the parties. The church was originally trustee for the estate and then turned it over to the memorial home. A suit to dislodge the memorial home was started by a portion of the church members, bringing the present attack on the action by other members who held that the church had not authorized the suit.
