Primitive Forest Region Designated

WASHINGTON, July 20.—(AP)—The forest service announced today that Secretary Wallace had designated as the Olympic primitive area 238,930 acres of national forest land on the Olympic peninsula in the state of Washington.

The new area, an extension of the present Mt. Olympus national monument, will be set aside as a perpetual wilderness reservation.

The forest service said this action was a major step toward adequately safeguarding recreational values of the region and preserving outstanding areas of virgin timber without crippling the economic life of the Olympic peninsula, which is dependent upon timber resources.

Together with the Mt. Olympus national monument, recreation reserves in the Olympic mountains will total some 660,000 acres, an area approximately that of the state of Rhode Island.

Board to Inspect Mount Hood Loop

Today the state highway commission will inspect the Mt. Hood loop road, taking lunch with the Hood River chamber of commerce. Tuesday night the commission will hold a hearing in Salem on the matter of the Salem-Dayton road.

Wednesday the commission will inspect the two Santiam highways and the connecting road to Belknap Springs.

Thursday's session will be in Portland where bids for $500,000 worth of work will be received.
