There She Goes!

"No Favor Sway Us; No Fear Shall Awe" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

CHARLES A. SPRAGUE Editor-Manager SHELDON P. SACKETT Managing-E. T

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING CO. Member of the Associated Press

Salem Postoffice

THE Statesman has received the following letter from Hugh V. Harris, route 4, Salem:

What a shame it seems to take the taxpayers money to tear down a beautiful building like the Salem postoffice and build an entire new one when all that is necessary is an addition. And what a pity that those in power can't figure out something like tearing down the courthouse, if they must tear something down, and exchanging that block for the postoffice block and present building. "Then the government could build a new postoffice closer in to town, and the county would have a fine substantial building to use as a courthouse after adding as much extra to it as was

The view expressed in the first paragraph in one which doubtless is felt by many citizens served by the Salem the streets of this capital citypostoffice. The fact of the matter is, that the treasury department, which has charge of public buildings, made a very careful survey of the present postoffice and a study of probable needs for the next quarter century. The inspectors came to the conclusion, based on a study of the costs of remodeling, that it would cost the government less money to tear this structure down and build a new than it would to remodel and enlarge the old building. This is a fact rather familiar to Salem those who have attempted to remodel old houses: the cost further from its capital than the runs into more money than anticipated, and in the end it is Beaver state's Albany-43 and still an "old house."

In the case of the postoffice, it appears to be a massive building, built of hewn stone which would last for ages. So it had arrived at and taken charge would so far as the walls are concerned. But the interior is of of "Hazen's Camp," to be later frame construction, which would burn like a torch if ignited. known as Fort Yambill, on April The first thing the government architects thought would be the duties of engineer of connecessary in remodeling was to tear out the interior and make struction, commandant, quarterit fireproof; otherwise it seemed foolish to put more money in the structure by building an addition. This fireproofing the present structure was what ran the cost away up.

As to trading lots with the county, that was considered by the government; but the county has made no moves toward | charge of the guardianship of the a new courthouse; and the government officials felt the delay would be too great if they waited on the county for action. Then the county might not want to step back a block. All of this is offered in explanation of the points raised by Mr. Harris. One more point is worthy of notice. The plans for the new postoffice call for moving the building farther front to- of Russell fighting under a pivotal ward Church street than the present building. A driveway to order of Sheridan, the two men service the rear of the building will run through the block enjoyed relationships like those from State to Court streets. There will be no entryway from Cottage street. Instead the area between the postoffice driveway and Cottage street, nearly half the block, will be leveled and parked, serving almost as a western extension of Willson park. This will help to compensate the loss of the east end ing in its huge basement room of the park through moving the capitol a half block west.

Power Distribution

ernment dams. He said Saturday: "The public interest demands that the power that is being or soon will be generated by the Tennessee Valley Authority and at the Bonneville dam and other public works projects should be made to serve the greatest number of our people at the and, as far as possible, without injury to existing actual invest-

With this policy there should be little quarrel. Not only fairness to existing investment but practical economics dictate the use of existing facilities for distributing the newly saw." generated power from Bonneville and other plants, rather than the duplication of such facilities at public expense. The government agencies can control the resale price through the federal power commission and through state regulatory commissions. In this territory the prospect of savings through the Bonneville power to the individual consumer is not very great no matter what system of distribution is used because electric power rates already are very low, on a com-

Every effort should be made to set up the governing authority for Bonneville so it will have power to negotiate; and then efforts should be made to deal with utilities already established, private or public, to make them the carriers for Bonneville power, with savings in generating costs to be pass-

It does seem practical however to offer power in large blocks at low costs to industries in the Bonneville area in order to attract them. That was the program of the late George W. Joseph who stirred up the power issue in Oregon, His argument was that new industries would provide employment and markets for the whole area.

The dam will be completed before many months. Congress should legislate on the subject early in the coming session.

Stings of Ingratitude

T is amusing to note the hymn of hate now being sung by the democratic press against the du Ponts and against William Randolph Hearst. The Portland Journal and the East Oregonian of Pendleton have wept copious draughts of tears efficiently done, but not to his over the contributions, $5,000 apiece, of several of the du | taste. Ponts to the republican campaign in Maine. Yet four years ago they had no complaint whatever when the duPonts were pouring money heavily into the democratic campaign fund. In fact it was the money put up by them and by their chief assistant Raskob which kept the democratic party afloat in the critical days from 1928 on.

Nor did these newspapers lament four years ago when William Randolph Hearst was blasting at Hoover through his newspapers and urging the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Hearst's switch of the California delegation at Chicago from Garner to Roosevelt, made on the solicitation of Governor Curley of Massachusetts, one of the leading pre-Chicago Roosevelt boosters, was what put Roosevelt across for the nomination. Now Hearst is anathema to the new deal; he is even "a certain notorious newspaper owner" (instead of Bertie McCormick of the Chicago Tribune.) Politics does make strange bedfellows. In the present case the trouble seems merely to be that duPonts and Hearst fell out of bed with Roosevelt. The brothers once beloved now feel the stings of ingratitude.

Mister Bridges of San Francisco has gone to Washington to threaten a general maritime strike unless enforcement of the Copeland safety-at-sea law is suspended. The law it seems, was not first written or okayed by Mister Bridges. He even threatens to "test the measure in the courts." If it is held "unconstitutional," as he desires, will the judges come in for some more abuse for thwarting the will of congress? But just where does the congress come in if it must take its orders from Mister Bridges?

The Capital Journal wants to know what ones of the new deal laws the republicans would repeal. It isn't necessary to answer the question. To date a large share of the new deal laws have been killed by the supreme court as fast as the legislation came before it. The pertinent question of the campaign is: What are the democrats going to do about that?

Mayor Carson of Portland paid his respects to crackpots and flapmouthed politicians "who don't know a kilowatt from a mixed drink". Also he denounced going deeper into bonded debt. His speech was almost an echo of that of his fellow-democrat, Governor Martin. It sort of makes one rub his eyes and ask, What is the new deal party in Oregon, anyway?

One banker told the others at San Francisco to be "more libe That is always good advice,-for the other banker.

Bits for Breakfast

By R. J. HENDRICKS

Battle of the Opequon, 9-22-36 that led to Appomattor, 72nd anniversary: Russell fell, fighting under Sheridan;

5 5 5 On Saturday, the 19th, this column contained a few lines, saying that was the 72nd anniversary of the battle of the Opequon, and announcing further comments on the important historical event in future issue. This promise is hereby redeemed: Important in the history of the nation and of the world were the issues of that battle, and of especial interest was that struggle to the people of Oregon and more particularly of Salem, for the two principal figures in the conduct of it were once familiar ones on Generals Sheridan and Russell. the first named then a second lieutenant and the other his cap-

Russell was ten years the elder, the two born in near places, Sheridan at Albany, Russell at Salem, New York; the Empire state's being only 17 miles 26 miles respectively.

S.e cond Lieutenant Sheridan 25, 1856, immediately assuming master, fosterfather of thousands of recently arrived and arriving restless Indians, fresh, most of them, from war trails, When Sheridan thus assumed Coast reservation of Oregon, he was aged 25 years, one month, 19

Captain Russell arrived to have general direction on July 1 follow-

From that day until the death of father and son, or of David and Jonathan, or Damon and Pythias.

They attended the historic ball at Salem, Nov. 17, 1857, dedicatthe first woolen mill west of the Missouri river; present all prominent officials and the Northwest's best society. A. H. Reynolds, afterward

RESIDENT ROOSEVELT issued an important declarafounder of Walla Walla's first tion of policy respecting distribution of power from gov- bank, loaned Russell and Sheridan money-needed for acquiring land equities. Mutual interest, perfect cooperation, marked the lives of these men from their first meet-

self had acquired vast experience in that field, Sheridan was to say of Russell: "He was the ablest manager of Indian affairs I ever

Firing on Fort Sumter brought ense feelings at Fort Yambill. Russell and his company marched away, leaving Sheridan in command, Captain Archer was ordered to relieve Sheridan. Learning Archer intended going South, Sheridan refused the transfer. Archer resigned, left July 17. Sheridan remained until Sept. 1, when Capt. Owen arrived. In the waiting period Sheridan met A. Bush, founder and publisher of The Statesman; told his editor friend he yearned to go, as duty called; also he thought, if the war lasted long, he perhaps would gain promotion; might become even a captain!

Two days' horseback ride took him to Portland; boarding a steamer there, another at San Francisco via Panama, he was soon in New York and presently at Jefferson barracks, Missouri, where he found resignations and rapid changes had advanced him to a captaincy, 10th infantry, of which W. T. Sherman had just been made colonel!

. 3 3 Sheridan for several months had multifarious duties, mostly grilling work unraveling tangles in commissary matters-needed.

From a clear sky, never learned by him how, he was offered the colonelcy of the 2nd Michigan cavalry, by Governor Blair, seeking a regular army officer, because of organization bickerings,

Sheridan handed General Halleck the telegram containing the offer; said he wished to accept; wanted active field work. Haileck replied that the war department's approval was required, because some dignitary was against assigning regular officers to volunteer regiments. Consulting Captain Russell A Alger, (afterward general governor, secretary of war, etc..) and Lieutenant Wallbridge of the Michigan regiment, Sheridan so pleaded his cause that Halleck took a chance—let him go without consulting the war department. Thus Sheridan was "on his way." The child of fortune who never tasted defeat was in the line of manifest (or was it foreordained?) destiny. (In after years, Alger, grown wealthy, Sheridan a present of $10,000.) Within a few brief weeks after becoming colonel, Sheridan wore the silver embroidered star of a brigadier, the right won at Booneville, Miss. Five brigadier generals wired headquarters: "He is worth his weight in gold," asking sheridan's promotion. Came success where others failed at Perryville. At Stone River he saved the army of Rosecrans (who had headed the dispetitioning his advance-force possible in two year tide has been shown before. It was shown between 1928 and 1930. when the sweep was in favor of crats were at an all-time low in ing week.

Interpreting the News

the democrats. In 1928 the demothe presidential election, which was between Mr. Hoover and Governor Smith, the democrats won only 87 electoral votes to the republicans' 444. In the elections to the house of representatives that year, the democrats won only 165 seats to the republicans' That was in November, 1928.

Iwo years later, in 1930, there was no presidential election by which to make comparison. But in the house of representatives the democrats won a majority, 219 to the republicans' 214. In short, an immense republican victory in 1928 became, two years later, a narrow democratic victory. The question this year is whether the same thing can happen in the opposite direction.

party has farther to go than the al expenditure in the critical situdemocrats had in the earlier period. For the republicans, 1934 was an all-time low-an all-time low indeed for either party. The republicans in 1934 won only 102 seats in the house of representatives to the democrats' 322. But it is apparent that in recent times a political tide can run with a swiftness that was not possible few years ago. The causes for the faster tempo include the loosening of party ties which leads masses of voters to swing from one side to the other, and an acceleration wrought perhaps by the radio. How swift the present tide is can be realized by a look beneath In Maine, in 1934, the democrats This year the republicans won them by large majorities. That performance leaves no possible doubt that throughout the country the republicans are certain to

This. was illustrated in Maine. In that state the democratic candidate for senator, Mr. Brann, was universally recognized to be not a new dealer. His dissent from the new deal brought him much support that a new deal democratic candidate could not have got, and he came close to winning. Had he won, he would have become, in the senate, a follower of the anti-new deal democratic leadership provided by such democrats as Senator Glass of Virginia.

everywhere. Democrats are being elected to the senate and house in strong democratic states and districts hardly possible to be won by any republican, and many of are as opposed to the new deal as any republican. The same change is taking place a mong democratic senators whose seats hold over for two or four years and who are not up for reelection this year. There are democratic senators who up to now have 'gone along" with the new deal and Mr. Roosevelt but who, from now on, will in the senate follow leadership like that of Senator

Another factor that emerged in last Tuesday's primaries is the strength of Father Coughlin's following. In Michigan, a particularly faithful Coughlinite—he is Father Coughlin's Washington representative—entered the primary as a candidate for the democratic nomination for United States senator. He came within a few thousand votes or winning over the regular democratic contender. The vote was about 125,-000 to about 120,000. This strength of a Coughlinite in a Michigan democratic primary may be accounted for in part by the fact that it occurred in Father Coughlin's home state.

Observers agree, however, that Father Coughlin's following everywhere is considerable. They agree also that it is, like the priest himself, strongly anti-Roosevelt. Even that large part of it which is normally democratic is in this campaign anti-Roosevelt and antinew deal. With respect to the coming presidential election, most of Father Coughlin's following will vote for the candidate whom the priest has endorsed, Mr. Lemke of the union party. The current straw votes seem to indicate that Mr. Lemke will get befall of '63 at Chickamauga, leading the 20th corps, Army of the Cumberland, he won new laurels. Two months later, at Chattanooga, where his famous horse Rienzi was wounded the second of the four times while carrying his rider in battles, his command swept the heights over the crest of Missionary Ridge; magnificent charge, contributing much to Bragg's defeat; gaining Grant's favor-brightening afresh the brilliancy of his star of destiny. Grant, promoted to lieutenant general, gave Sheridan command of all the Army of the Potomae's cavalry. Now believed unbeatable, he

31 at his preceding birthday! The

easily, quickly reorganized that fighting force-and won battle after battle, from the Wilderness

eral the last day of 1862; he was (Continued tomorrow.)

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The tween 4 and 5 per cent of the Maine election, and primaries in total vote. Most of that is a vote three other states, show how which, if Mr. Lemke and Father great is the mo- Coughlin did not exist, would be mentum a polit- for Mr. Roosevelt. It is subtracical tide can tion from Mr. Roosevelt, and gather within a therefore an aid to the republi-

> In two of the three states in case runs in fa- which primaries were held last vor of the repub- week, Michigan and Massachusetts, the number of voters who The speed and entered the republican primary was markedly greater than the number who entered democratic primaries. This fact, and additional evidence suggest that the republicans should carry these states in November. Altogether, the republicans have had a cheer-Copyright, 1936, New York Tribune Inc.

The Safety

Statesman Readers

COMES TO STATESMAN DEFENSE

To the Editor: Although I do not agree with you on all your edtorials, I believe in the old adage, 'give the devil his dues," so I am defending your attitude in regard to a certain editorial in which Les-In the present two years tide ter Lamb takes issue with you. in favor of the republicans, that and asks, "does it warrant federation, when millions were without food and clothing?" I will answer most emphatically, No! It did not warrant spending billions in the way it has been spent, for much could have been accomplished with a small fraction of the amount, turned over and over, through forced circulation.

This borrowed money must be paid back, and under the present orgy of borrowing and spending without the method of forcing this money to revolve, will eventually force the nation into bankruptcy. And more than that millions of this money has been spent as Mr. Lamb truly says, "on power and irrigation dams," to operate more manufacturing plants, when we the surface of the Maine election. have more goods produced now than we can use, and so much won two of the state's three seats grain and hogs that we have to in the lower house of congress. plow under and burn the grain, and kill and bury the hogs. So those two seats back and won why more irrigation dams? "Oh, consistency thou art a jewel." Where is the logic of this?

0 1916, Ring Pennerer Syndicate, Inc., World right

Twenty feet behind came one is tremendous

Prang.

ical warehouse

n doing as you are.

Before the cheering,

think you are taking the proper

ever repeated the Townsen

B. I. PLUMMER.

Yes the millions needed food and tion was on, Colonel Dewey Haik has clothing, and twelve million out of offered the name of Senator Windrip. Yes the millions needed food and make extraordinary gains in the the 13 millions still need some. As he finishes, down the center aisle thing to keep them from starving The tide against the democrats and freezing, for they have not strong. Against the new deal gotten anything yet, and never it is yet stronger. This latter tide will under this administration. expresses itself, in some cases, in About 500,000 boys were sent to lone, tall man. The delegates had support for candidates who are the CCC camps, when they should been craning around to see what democrats but not new dealers. have been at home with their would follow the relief victims. young families, or attending When they did see, they r school, or learning a trade, and they have simply gotten an exist- lone man-few of the crowd had ence out of this abomnible ar- seen him in the flesh; all of them rangement. I have visited their had seen him a hundred times in camps, and have had friends in press pictures photographed them, and I know what it is like! among litters of books in his stu-Then about one half million men put to work part time on starva- with President Roosevelt and Section wages. Is this logic? when retary Ickes-photographed shakthere is a way proposed, (which is ing hands with Senator Windrip much to Mr. Roosevelt's DISCRE-DIT, for he would not give Dr. Townsend a five minute interview to investigate his plan, which to arm thrown up in hysterical emsay the least was very unfair!) Something like this is going on and the proposed way is to put all to work and keep them at work, through forced circulation of money, and thus stop four fifths of the crime, and close the poor houses, and this can be done with the democrats who are winning a 2 percent transaction tax which will produce enough revenue so we can take the 33 percent off the gasoline, the 100 percent off of cigarettes, and the 80 percent off of the liquor. I mention these taxes to show that nothing is thought of in paying these monster taxes, but a little 2 percent tax, how can we stand it, when the plan will inrease our business to four or five times as much.

The present administration has only kept about one million at work, when the whole 13 million ould have had work, and all through the TOWNSEND PLAN! And along this line I wish to say hat in the Sunday edition of The statesman I noticed an article that t seems by a statement purported o have come from a former ownsend speaker, Mr. S. C. Williams, that since having been barred from speaking in the Townsend clubs, because, as he says according to the article, "Dr. Shadduck, state area manager, is encouraging public ownership." stead of taking it up with national Well that may be true, but this headquarters. We know, if you do sition of epic poetry, as he was in ten in the evening Doremus wearbusiness has not been carried on in Townsend club meetings, and I lowing is not the course of a do not think it a crime to talk pub- Townsendite, and emphatically lic ownership as a citizen, not yet

And I would like to knw if you

Doremus Jessup, despite his local out of the air—sang to the tune ovanezza" was to the Italians, reputation as an eccentric, knew he of "Yankee Doodle" words which "The Horst Wessel Song" to the was a small-town bourgeois intellectuate the herself had written." she herself had written:

al, an indolent and somewhat senti-mental liberal. Walt Trowbridge had been nominated for president by the Republicans. The Democratic conven-A riding on a hobby— A riding on a hobby-To throw Big Business out, by Gosh. And be the People's Lobby! of the convention hall comes a private procession of 31 persons. The applause

Buzz and buzz and keep it up,

Our cares and needs he's toting

Chorus:

You are a most ungrateful pup, Unless for Buzz you're voting. he League of the Forgotten Men Don't like to be forgotten. They went to Washington and then They sang, "There's something To rule all the world for right rotten!

dy-photographed in conference That joyous battle song was sung on the radio by 19 different prima donnas before midnight, by some 16 million less vocal Amer--photographed before a microphone, his shricking mouth a least ninety million friends and dark, open trap and his lean right to come. All through the camvoice on the radio till they knew paign, Buzz Windrip was able to get lots of jolly humor out of puns it as they knew the voices of their own brothers; all of them recog-own brothers; all of them recog-wash. Walt Trowbridge, he jeered, was nized, coming through the wide not going to either of them! main entrance, at the end of the

Vet Lee Sarason knew that in Windrip parade, the apostle of the addition to this comic master-Forgotten Men, Bishop Paul Peter piece, the cause of Windrip required an anthem more elevated Then the convention cheered in thought and spirit, befitting Buzz Windrip for four unbroken the seriousness of crusading Am-Lee Sarason never told any one ave Buzz Windrip that both flags cheering for Windrip had been listened to the radio he had had had been manufactured on Hester ended and the delegates were temporarily installed in his office Street, New York, in 1929, for the patriotic drama, Morgan's Riding. saving the nation and cutting one gets in, he won't be having any and that both came from a theat-Windrip parade neared the platform, they were greeted by Mrs. with a quite remarkable surgeon, the lively young human slaughter Adelaide Tarr Gimmitch, the celeone Dr. Rector Macgoblin. brated author, lecturer, and com-

This Dr. Macgoblin, soon to beposer, who - suddenly conjured onto the platform as if whisked as accomplished in syndicated medical journalism, in the reviewing of books about education and course Mr. Williams, if Dr. Shad- psychoanalysis, in preparing glosses upon the philosophies of He- the presidential candidate. duck has done this? If you have gel, Professor Guenthler, Houston pledge, you know you have not Stewart Chamberlain and Lothron kept that pledge when you take Stoddard, in the rendition of Mo- gained then on Senator Windrip. the matter in your own hands, in- zart on the violin, in semi-professional boxing, and in the componot, that the course you are fol- the practice of medicine. Dr. Macgoblin! What a man!

Another Horst Wessel Song you are one no longer if you insist titled "Bring Out the Old-time Musket," became to Buzz Wind- Perefixe. There he found a satisrip's band of liberators what "Gi-

Nazis, "The International" to all Marxians. Along with the convention, the radio millions heard Mrs. Aedelaide Tarr Gimmitch's contralto, rich as peat, chanting:

Bring Out The Old-Time Musket Dear Lord, we have sinned, we have slumbered, And our flag lies stained in the dust,

And the souls of the Past are calling, calling, Arise from your sloth - you must!" Lead us, O soul of Lincoln,

Inspire us, spirit of Lee. eousness To fight for the right

To awe with our might, we did in 'sixty-three.

See, youth with desire hot glowing, , maiden, with fearless eye, Leading our ranks Thunder the tanks.

Aeroplanes cloud the sky. Bring out the old-time musket. Rouse up the old-time fire! ee, all the world is crumbling. Dreadful and dark and dire. America! Rise and conquer The world to our heart's desire!

"Great showmanship. P. T. Barnum or Flo Ziegfeld never put on better," mused Doremus, as he Long after the convention's studied the A. P. flimsies, as he again at their proper business of And, much later: "When Buzh another's throats, Sarason had parade of wounded soldiers. That Mrs. Gimmitch sing a more inspir- will be bad Fascist psychology. All ational hymn, with words by Sar- those poor devils he'll hide away ason himself, in collaboration in institutions, and just bring out cattle in uniforms. Hm."

The thunderstorm, which had come a national monument, was mercifully lulled, burst again in wrathful menace.

All afternoon the convention balloted, over and over, with no change in the order of votes for ward six, Miss Perkins's manager threw her votes to Roosevelt, who They seemed to have settled down to an all-night struggle, and at ily left the office. He did not, to night, want the sympathetic and extremely feminized atmosphere The Sarason-Macgoblin ode, en- of his home, and he dropped in at the rectory of his friend Father fying unfeminized, untalcumized group. The Reverend Mr. Falck was there. Swart, sturdy young (Continued on Page 7)

Ten Years Ago

September 22, 1916 Motor show at the fair was the largest in history; electric lights, starters and cloverleaf seating being among the luxuriant appoint-

Plans for a new depot are now in the hands of San Francisco officials and action is confidently expected in a short time.

A small board is held responsible for the collapse of the new concrete Independence bridge.

Twenty Years Ago

September 22, 1926 Mt. Angel residents are already lanning to rebuild the college buildings destroyed by fire late resterday morning.

Federal Judge Charles E. Wolverton of Portland dropped dead in the Gearhart hotel lobby today.

First annual fall window show crowds in attendance.

often shapted. "Brios Out the Old-Time Musket."