"No Favor Sway Us; No Fear Shall Awe" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

CHARLES A. SPRAGUE . . . . Editor-Manager SHELDON P. SACKETT . . . . . Managing-EL Y

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING CO. Member of the Associated Presa The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the se for publica-tion of all news dispatches credited to it or not otherwise credited to

More of the Same?

very apt answer to the democratic demand from the republicans for something constructive is the retort: Just what are the democrats proposing that is constructive? Is their answer going to be "more of the same?"

Just what is the democratic policy for the next four years? Having had four years in office, the Rooseveltians should be able to outline a specific program for the immediate future. What is it?

Shall we have four years of deficits, with the public debt mounting by from two to four billions a year?

Shall we have four more years of a prosperity which rests on unstable foundations of government borrowing and spending, and a rubber dollar of uncertain value?

Shall we have four more years of boondoggling, of extravagance in relief administration, of worthless works, or absurd ventures like the Florida ship canal?

Shall we have a revival of the NRA with its aid to monopoly, and its regimentation of business? Shall we have four more years of hasty enactment of ill considered legislation, so defective it will not measure up to the requirements of the constitution? Shall we have four more years of planned scarcity, the destruction of food animals and growing crops? Shall we have four more years of increasingly heavy importation of corn and wheat and other foodstuffs into this country? Shall we have four more years of a policy which deprives

Shall we have four more years of policy which turns southern share croppers off the land, and takes away the jobs of cotton workers while prices to consumers of cotton

American farmers of their foreign markets?

Shall we have four more years of a labor policy which increases industrial strife, encourages, strikes with attendant turmoil and loss to wage-earners, employers and consumers? Shall we have four more years of a labor policy which proposes no sound basis for social justice, but transfers power to radical labor leaders? Shall we have four more years of whipping up of class divisions and invoking of class hatreds in a country which ought to be free from class lines?

Shall we have four more years of a rubber stamp congress and a supreme court threatened by the encroachment of the ambitious executive departments? What specifically are the democrats proposing? Are they going to try to amend the constitution to give the central government absolute power to dictate the economic and industrial life of the people? Are they going to pack the supreme court with more yes-men for the new deal? Are they going to turn loose on the country a fresh crop of Rex Tugwells eager to "make America over" along lines they have figured out in Harvard university or Columbia? It seems to The Statesman that the democrats have quite as big a task in being "constructive" and "avoiding generalities" as the republicans.

In brief the constructive and definite program of the republicans is this:

1. Balance the budget by eliminating waste and if necessary increasing taxes.

2. Restore and preserve free enterprise, subject to reasonable regulation by states or the federal government, in their appropriate spheres.

3. Establish prosperity on a firm basis of private work and effort, providing adequate employment at good wages; on the basis of a sound currency and of restored trade, both domestic and foreign.

4. Hold fast to the civil liberties guaranteed by the constitution, and now threatened by alien forms of social organ-

5. Assure to labor jobs and to farmers markets and to consumers prices determined by fair competition instead of

6. Develop the American conception of democracy, free from class divisions and animosities; with ownership of property widely distributed; with liberty for individuals to rise to the top by use of their energies and resources.

Heading the republican ticket is Alfred M. Landon, governor of Kansas, a "typical American"; no inheritor of a fortune, but one who has in the hard field of business demonstrated his own competence; no political messiah or worker of political magic; a man who knows the people because he is one of them; a man who has shown independence of judgment and of character; a man who proposes to invite the nation's leaders to assist in the solution of national problems. Second man on the ticket is Frank W. Knox, another "typical American", who rose from newsboy to become proprietor of a large newspaper, who served honorably in two wars, who is vigorous, who has a progressive viewpoint without the fringe of hazy

These men, on the constructive platform for saving the country proposed by the republicans, are worthy of the suffrage of the American people in the November election.

"It Can't Happen Here"

T seems almost incredible that an entire town could be snuffed out by flames within a few hours, as was Bandon in the night hours a few days ago. People live ordinarily in such security that they think catastrophes must always be remote,-floods in Texas, drouth in Dakota, fires in crowded cities. Scourges of fire or famine or disease "can't happen here." Yet they do come, at times unforeseen.

The Bandon fire, coming on top of the heavy fire loss in Tillamook county three years ago should knock clear out of our heads the customary complacency that forest fires will not occur again, or if they do happen, will not prove very destructive. There is simply no sure way of stopping a great wall of flames "crowning" through the wooded country. Often all that can be done is to wait for nature to send rain or damp winds. Such being true, much sharper discipline is necessary to protect cities and forests in the timber country. This means limitation of movement into the forest area in the times of low humidity. It means no burning of slashings until safety is assured. It means much greater restriction of hunting privileges in the fall of the year. What is the pleasure of a few deer-hunters compared with the preservation of the state's forest wealth and scenic beauty? The state must preserve these resources or it will become an empty, uninhabited waste.

The immediate necessity is the relief of the destitute. Citizens of Oregon should respond with great liberality in providing cash as well as commodities for Bandon and vicinity. Permanent reconstruction will call for careful planning in which non-residents can do very little, aside from properly constituted authorities. But now, make a donation to the Red Cross relief fund. Do it today; as a measure of your sympathy, and a token of gratitude that you have escaped the loss and suffering which befell those poor people.

Fairview Hunters Return From Trip with Two Deer

FAIRVIEW. Sept. 29 .- Two fine deer were bagged by Harry ruh and Mr. Bass of Fairview neighborhood, who returned from a hunting trip in eastern Oregon Friday. Will Marley, W. J. Pent-ney and John Reed left Thursday on a deer hunting trip to eastern

Bits for Breakfast

By R. J. HENDRICKS

9-30-36 Beginnings of the Oregon state training school for boys: matter was opened by Statesman?

2 2 2 Looking over the files of The Statesman for the last days of 1886 and the opening ones of 1887, searching for items about the first bridge across the Willamette, which was at Salem, the writer found a good many inter-

The reader will recall the direct results of the search in the series of this column taking up the three issues, Sept. 12-13.

3 3 The fight for a bridge having resulted in victory, the publishers of that period were emboldened to go forward in advocating a number of other things promising the city's growth and the country's development.

Among these were a woolen mill, canning and packing concerns, street railways, prohibition of live stock and poultry running at large on the streets, etc., and further state institutions including reform schools for delinquent boys and girls.

2 2 2 The issue of December 17, 1886, contained at least three articles, under the titles, "The Reform "For a Reform School Matter," School," and "Reform the Parents First."

The first named article opened: "The Statesman has aroused considerable interest in the question of the establishment of a reform school in this state," and went on to say that at the time 10 suspensions stood against unruly boys in the Salem public schools. It was argued:

"That it is right and proper to suspend unruly boys from the privileges of a free education at be hardly a question-for it is not the proper thing to inoculate the good and well behaved children with the presence of the bad and unruly. "When you find rotton apples in your bins you throw them out, for fear that they will make the sound ones rot. This is the same principle. "But the question again recurs to us, what will we do with the ungovernable youth? Will we leave them on the streets to go through a training for the penitentiary, to sink clear below the stream of decent society?

Would it not be better to pro vide a cure for them if possible? Would it not be a sound principle of business to establish a reform

"Some will say reform the parents first. True they need reforming, but this does not settle the question. Many of these boys will sometime be parents themselves. and it is a poor time to begin to reform them after their habits have been made a part of their existence. The legislature meets in January, and it will have a chance to give us something definite and practical on this subject."

* * * The matter under the second named title read in part; "The attention of the Oregon legislature is respectfully directed to the fact of the need of a reform school in this state. Such institutions have been established and are conducted in most of the states of the union, and are regarded as necessary adjuncts and helps to the preservation of so

"There are now standing 10 suspensions of boys from 10 to 18 years of age from the Salem public schools alone. These boys are troublesome and disobedient, and are especially annoying to lady teachers, and they must be sent out on the streets, there to acquire habits of vicious idleness, that will fit them for cells in the penitentiary.

"It seems hard to send these troublesome boys out of the school room into the streets, but their presence is made unbearable by their conduct there, and it is a necessity. Then what is to be done with them?

Will you leave them on the streets to grow up criminals and outcasts of society? "Putting it down on a solid business basis, will it pay for the taxpayers to let this matter rest as it now stands?

"Will we have no other place to send the criminal and ungovernable youth of our state except to the penitentiary?

"The penitentiary is surely not a success as a reformatory insti-To mix these with the criminally vicious and to associate with the vilest outcasts of society, who are not in sympathy with the laws of restraint or the rules and usages of honesty, honor or decency, is surely not a good school for the youth who is already on the downward path, who is already out of sympathy, out of step, with the tacit rules of respectable society and good order

"This is a question that de erves the attention of our legis

"The proper care of the youth of the land is the hope of the future progress and morals of our country. As the twig is bent the tree is inclined, is an axiom.

"Of course the establishment of reform school will not settle the whole question of the ungovernable and hoodlum youth of the state, but the writer wishes to hazard the prediction that it will be a great help, and will be paying investment to taxpayers.

"With this opinion in view, public attention is directed to the The third title was over a com nunication by George Henry, in which he said he had noted the appeal of The Statesman for a state reform school, and the state ment that there were then stand ing 10 suspensions of boys from 10 to 18 years of age in the Salem public schools.

On the Record By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Claims of Dictatorship

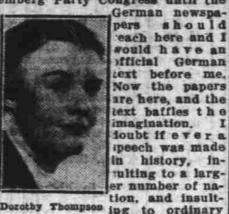

have waited to comment on Hitler's proclamation at the Nuremberg Party Congress until the German newspapers should each here and I text baffles the peech was made history, inmagination.

er number of nation, and insult-Derothy Thompson ing to ordinary intelligence as well. The speech contains a long list of the specific claims of the German dictatorship. Were these claims tenable, Mr. Hitler would stand as the greatest miracle man in history, and a most powerful argument would be made for dictatorship everywhere. Inside Germany not one of them will be challenged in any newspaper or any platform or in any publication. Outside Germany it is more difficult to contest them, because all the facts are not known. But they ought to be analyzed on the basis of what is known because the people of the democratic world have been treated to very misleading propaganda.

Mr. Hitler's insults to Russia are one thing. They are sui generis. As Sir Austin Chamberlain -who will not be accused of pro-"It Soviet tendencies-remarked, will be difficult to find a parallel for such a gross attack by the rulers of one country upon the government of another." But these remarks were given wide notice here and need not be gone into. What was not so generally noted was that Mr. Hitler did not confine his caustic comments to the hands of the public, there can Russia. He embraced in his disdain all the nations of Europe "with the exception of one great power (Italy) and a few other countries." "Everywhere else," he said, "we see the spasms of Bolshevist revolution."

> That "everywhere else" is an insult to every democratic country in Europe, including the "Great Power" of England, which with democratic institutions is enjoying unparallel prosperity and social unity. Bolshevism looms as an immediate threat only in Spain where German intervention has increased its menace; in France there is social disorder precipitated by the fear of German Fascism and by the persisted-in deflation. But it is still a long cry from Bolshevism.

That many claims which the Nazi government makes for the display Germany under dictatorship as a modern Eden. Unemployment has been reduced from six million to one million. The dispossession of German peasants has ended, and the agricultural income is higher than in any previous year of peace ; trade has in-creased; the German port towns are lively with ship - building; many factories have doubled tripled and quadrupled their workers; automobile factories are increasing tremendously; and motor cars will increase from 45,000 in 1932 to 250,000 this year; the deficit of states and cities has been removed; the Reich has an increased tax revenue of five billions: the German Reich has roads unequaled anywhere in the world. These are the high points of the Fuehrer's claims.

What is there in them? 1 The International Labor Of-tion in increased business laregly due to the immense armament program which is busy manufacturing goods of no use to Germans except to fight with; by spreading work in the factories, whereby more people work but for less average weekly wage; by in-creasing the army eightfold and would have an official German introducing universal compulsory ext before me. two-year military training; by re-Now the papers moving women from industry; by are here, and the work camps which demand com-> for a stated period; by the forced emigration of over 60,000 Jews. 2. The peasants have been saved from foreclosure by completely limiting their ownership rights; no peasant may raise credit on his land, mortgage it, or sell it. Nor may he sell his products to any one except government agencies at fixed prices, and he must deliver fixed quotas. Agriculture enjoys a monopoly of the domestic market at the cost of high food prices and definite shortage to the urban pulsory service of all young men consumer. 3. Trade has been restored to almost the position which it occupied when Mr. Hitler came into power at the bottom of the deression. Today trade is on the increase everywhere in the world. German trade under the Republic surpassed the figures of 1913.

and excited.

from them.

directly and solely; that he want the truths, the imperious and dangerous facts that had been hidden

"They say I want money-pow-from law firms right here in New York of three times the money I'll get as President! And power-why the President is the servant of every citizen in the country, and not just of the considerate folks, but also of every crank that comes pestering him by telegram and phone and letter. And yet, it's true, it's absolutely true I do want power, great, big, imperial power-but not for myself-no-

for you!-the power of your permission to smash the Jew finan-working you to death to pay the interest on their bonds; the grasping bankers-and not all of 'em

Jews by a darn sight!—the crook-

all, the sneaking spies of Moscow that want you to lick the boots of their self-appointed tyrants that rule not by love and loyalty, like

I want to, but by the horrible

Paradise on Earth

every humblest worker would be king and ruler, dominating representatives elected from among his own kind of people, and these representative not growing indifferent, as hitherto they had done, once they were far off in Washington, but kept alert to the public interest by the supervision of a strengthened Executive.

It sounded almost reasonable

The supreme actor, Buzz Win drip, was passionate yet never grotesquely wild. He did not gesture too extravagantly; only, like

Gene Debs of old, he reached out bony forefinger which seemed to jab into each of them and hook out each heart. It was his mad eyes, big staring tragic eyes, that startled them, now humbly plead-

He was obviously an honest and

ing, that soothed them.

He pictured, when, a Paradise

automatic pistol!"

for a while,

4. Ships are being built and the government is paying heavy deficits for their building. The whole Merchant Marine has been socialized, and the amount of the deficit is kept secret.

5. Production is enforced, by government order, many factories being compelled to undertake reorganization at a loss. Armament orders are making others pros-

6. In the democratic country of England which Hitler referred to disdainfully under his blanket indictment, the number of automo biles has increased from 223,000 in 1931 to 348,000 in 1934. Last year Germany had less than half as many autos as England, in spite of the fact that autos in Germany are exempted from taxation because their widespread ownership is desired for military purposes and in spite of the fact that there has been a vast increase of party and army orders for motor cars. There are more automobiles in democratic France with less than two-thirds of Germany's populaciers who've enslaved you, who're 7. The deficits of states and cities have been taken over by the federal government and thus "re-Debts owed to foreign ed labor-leaders just as much as creditors have been "frozen." the crooked bosses, and, most of

8. The Reich certainly has an increased tax revenue. The income tax begins at a wage or salary of 900 marks ($225) a year, on which a flat 10 per cent is paid. With compulsory party contributions and the compulsory social insurances, the total taxes are 30 per cent of such an income.

9. The great housing program support of its people and the ad- which Hitler points to with pride old political machines destroyed, that of his neighbor, Francis Tashas not proceeded faster than under the great building days of the Republic, Democratic England has rehoused 50 per cent of her entire population since 1918; Holland and Sweden are almost completely rebuilt. All without dictatorship.

> Mr. Hitler also made some grandoise claims for the renaissance of German culture. About that it is more difficult to judge But so far not a single novel or play of international recognition has emerged from Nazi Germany.

But there is one claim that cannot be denied. "There is not a Socialist, a Communist, a Center Party, or a bourgeois party member left in Germany." That claim cannot be disputed.

And one item Mr. Hitler failed to mention. He did not claim to have balanced the budget, al- body knows. And if anyone did. though he might have made the he would be sent to prison for fice recently reported that Ger- claim and no one could have con- publishing it. I suppose, under man citizens had been removed tradicted it. No budget has been the law of "divulging information from the unemployment rolls in published since he came into pow- damaging to the interests of the made official. the following manner: by absorp- er. What the national debt is, no nation."

"It Can't Happen Here" SINCLAIR LEWIS

Buss Windrip, rarin' counterpart of Huey Long, has captured the democratic presidential nomination on a platform atrongly fascist. He has followers in all party, formed in disgust at Windrip's demagogiam, has little chance. The communists put up seven parties. Jessup, in New York for Buss's final campaign address, gets his first view of the candidate's private army, the uniformed classes, his atrongest supporters being pension hunters, like Shad Ledue, hired man of Doremus Jessup, central figure of the novel. Jessup, Vermont publishs, is supporting the republican Trowbridge, for he feels Roosevelt's emergency third Minute Men, America's White Shirts.

Same Old Platform

mericul leader; a man of sorrows and sorrows and acquaint with woe.

Doremus marveled, "I'll be he often woke to remember it, not very laughingly.

CHAPTER XIII

And when I get ready to retire I'm going to build me an up-to-date bungalow in some lovely resort, not in Como or any other of the proverbial Grecian isles you may be sure, but in somewheres to feed out to the boobs—he's right in claiming that it's only he, and not Trowbridge or Roosevelt.

Same Old Platform and not Trowbridge or Roosevelt. Same Old Platform that can break the hold of the ab-Windrip started prosaically sentee bwners? And these Minute enough. You felt rather sorry for Men, his followers-oh, they were him, so awkwardly did he lumber pretty hasty, what I saw out on up the steps to the platform, the street, but still, most of 'em across to the center of the stage. are mighty nice, clean-cut young He stopped, stared owlishly. fellows, Seeing Buzz and, then listening to what he actually says Windrip outlined his too-famliar platform-Doremus was in- does kind of surprise you-kind of terested only in observing that make you think!" But what Mr. Windrip actually Windrip misquoted his own figures, regarding the limitation of had said, Doremus could not remember an hour later, when he fortunes, in Point Five.

had come out of the trance. He slid into a rhapsody of gen-He was so convinced then that eral ideas—a mishmash of polite Windrip would win that, on Tuesregards to Justice, Freedom day evening, he did not remain at Equality, Order, Prosperity, Patthe Informer office until the reriotism, and any number of other turns were all in. But if he did noble but slippery abstractions. not stay for the evidences of the Doremus thought he was being election, they came to him.

ored, until he discovered that, at Past his house, after midnight, some moment which he had not through muddy snow tramped a noticed, he had become absorbed triumphant and reasonably drunken parade, carrying torches and Something in the intensity with bellowing to the air of "Yankee which Windrip looked at his and- Doodle? new words revealed just ience, looked at all of them, his that week by Mrs. Adelaide Tarr glance slowly taking them in from | Gimmitch:

the highest-perched seat to the "The snakes disloyal to our Buzz nearest, convinced them that he We're riding on a rail, was talking to each individual. They'll wish to God they neve ed to take each of them into his When we got them in jail! heart; that he was telling them

Chorus: Buzz and buzz and keep it up To victory he's floated. You were a most ungrateful pup. Unless for Buzz you voted. Every M.M. get a whip er! Say, I've turned down offers To use upon some traitor, And every Antibuzz we skip Today, we'll tend to later.

Warning Note "Antibuzz," a word credited to Mrs. Grimmitch but more probably invented by Dr. Hector Macgoblin, was to be extensively used by lady patriots as a term expressing such vicious disloyalty to the State as might call for the firing squad. Yet, like Mrs. Gimmitch's splendid synthesis "Unkies," for soldiers of the A.E.F. it never really caught on.

Among the winter-coated par ders Poremus and Sissy thought they could make out Shad Ledue, Aras Dilley, that philoprogenitive squatter from Mount Terror; Charley Betts, the furniture dealer, and Tony Mogliani, the fruitseller. most ardent expounder of Italian Fascism in Central Vermont though he could not be

And, power of the whip, dark cell, the sure of it in the dimness behind the torches, Doremus rather thought that the lone large motor car following the procession was of democracy in which, with the Next morning at the Informer office, Doremus did not learn or so very much damage wrought by the triumphant Nordics they had merely upset a couple of privies, otrn down and burned the tailor shop sign of Louis Rotenstern, and somewhat badly beaten Clifford Little, the jeweler, a slight, curly-headed young man whom Shad Ledue despised because he organized theatricals and played the organ in Mr. Falck's church. That night Doremus found, on his front porch, a notice in red chalk upon butcher's paper:

You will get yrs Dorey sweeteart unless you get rite down on yr belly and crawl in front of the MM and the League and the Chief

It was the first time that Dore mus had heard of "the Chief," a sound American variant of "the Leader" or "the Head of the Government," as a popular title for Mr. Winrip. It was soon to be low, James Whitcomb Riley, Lord Macaulay, Henry Van Dyke, El-bert Hubbard, Plato, Hiawatha, & etc. Some of my friends laugh at me for it, but I have always cultivated a taste for the finest in literature. I got it from my Mother as I did everything that some people have been so good as to admire in me.

Doremus burned the red warn-

Zero Hour, Berzilius Windrip Certain though Doremus had been of Windrip's election, the event was like the long-dreaded passing of a friend.

"All right. Hell with this country, if it's like that. All these years I've worked-and I never did want to be on all these com mittees and boards and charity drives !- and don't they look silly now! What I always wanted to do was to sneak off to an ivory tower-or anyway, celluloid, imitation ivory-and read everything I've been too busy to read."

Thus Doremus, in late Novem-And he did actually attempt it, and for a few days reveled in it avoiding everyone save his family and Lorinda, Buck Titus, and Father Perefixe. Mostly, though, he found that he did not relish the "classics" he had so far miss ed, but those familiar to his youth. Then he saw that in everything his quest falled him. The reading was good enough, toothsome, satisfying, except that he felt guilty at having sneaked away to an Ivory Tower at all. Too many years he had made habit of social duty. He wanted to be "in" things, and he was daily more trritable as Windrip began, even before his inauguration, to dictate to the country.

Buzz's party, with the deser tions to the Jeffersonians, had less than a majority in Congress. "Inside dope" came to Doremus from Washington that Windrip was trying to buy, to flatter, to blackmail opposing Congressmen A President-Elect has unhallowed power, if he so wishes, and Windrip-no doubt with promises of abnormal favors in the way of patronage-won over a few. Five Jeffersonian Congressmen their elections challenged. One sensationally disappeared, and smoking after his galloping heels there was a devilish fume of emezzlements. And with each such triumph of Windrip, all the wellmeaning, cloistered Doremuses of the country were the more anxfous. All through the "Depression." ever since 1929, Doremus had felt sense of futility in trying to do anything more permanent than shaving or eating breakfast, that was general to the country. He could no longer plan, for himself or for his dependents, as the citizens of this once unsettled country had planned since 1620.

Privilege of Planning Why, their whole lives had been redicated on the privilege of planning. Depressions had been only cyclic storms, certain to end in sunshine; Capitalism and parlimentary government were eternal, and eternally being improved by the honest votes of Good Cit-

Doremus's grandfather, Calvin, Civil War veteran and ill-paid, illiberal Congregational minister, had yet planned, "My son, Loren, shall have a theoligical education, and I think we shall be able to build a fine new house in fifteen or twenty years." That had given him a reason for working and a goal. His father, Loren, had vowed. "Even if I have to economize on books a little, and perhaps give up this extravagance of eating meat four times a week-very bad for the digestion, anyway-my son, Doremus, shall have a college education, and when, as he desires, he becomes a publicist, I think perhaps I shall be able to help him for a year or two. And then I hope-oh, in a mere five or six years more-to buy that complete Dickens with all the illustrations -oh, an extravagance, but a thing to leave to my grandchildren to treasure forever!" But Doremus Jessup could not plan. "I'll have Sissy go to Smith before she studies architecture," or "If Julian Falck and Sissy get married and stick here in the Fort I'll give 'em the southwest lot and some day, maybe fifteen years from now, the whole place will be filled with nice kids again!" No, fifteen years from now, he sighed, Sissy might be hustling hash for the sort of workers who called the waiter's art "hustling hash;" and Julian might be in a concentration camp-Fascist or Communist! The Horatio Alger tradition, from rags to Rockefellers, was clean gone out of the America it had dominated.

It seemed faintly silly to hope, to try to prophesy, to give up sleep on a good mattress for toil on a typewriter, and as for saving

(To Be Continued)

en Years Ago

September 30, 1926 Captain A. J. Spong, well known riverman owner of "Spong's Landing" passed away last night.

Classes in the new Salem branch of the University of Ore-gon extension division have start-

Iwenty Years Ago

September 30, 1916

Neutrality of Amercians is much doubted, firmness is urged in dealing with U. S.

Will Tanner, serving time f r

