New Attack on Unemployment By F. R. Looms

Action Along NRA Lines Forecast by Some of Capitol Observers

Amending Constitution Possible; President To Draft Message

By EDWARD J. DUFFY
WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Late returns emphasizing the epochal endorsement of Roosevelt policies on the unemployment problem along NRA lines is in prospect.

How soon the move may come, what form it may take and the possible effects on party alignments were foremost topics in ranks both for and against the administration as the president's re-election plurality approached 18,000,000.

With final tabulations being slowly accumulated, the total popular vote reached 41,812,237 tonight. Returns still were missing from 15,000 of the nation's 122,000 precincts, but President Roosevelt had a lead of 25,347,581 to 15,795,236.

Awaiting his triumphal return to the capitol tomorrow, officials were reluctant to discuss the probable program for publication. But data was being accumulated for Mr. Roosevelt's consideration in drafting his message to the opening of congress two months from today and his inaugural address January 20.

President of NRA in Recent Talks Recalled
Inquirers were referred to his campaign speeches and the democratic platform for light on what he might say. It was recalled by some that he praised NRA as an instrument of progress. While calling the emergency over, he was clearly mindful of the heavy relief burden and the necessity for reducing the ranks of an estimated 11,000,000 unemployed if the budget-balancing he promised was to be realized.

The democratic platform pledged to seek a "clarifying amendment" to the constitution, ways could be found to handle wage and hour problems and ban "unfair business practices" within the constitution as it stands. The amendment would be designed to give the required power to congress and the state governments, "each within its proper jurisdiction."

In the lack of specific information on White House plans, speculation about an equivalent to NRA ranged from an early attempt to obtain such an amendment to a recommendation for immediate congressional legislation regulating business. Some felt a new attempt might be made to get supreme court approval of federal action without an amendment.

Presidential Race is Shown As Chief Cause, Heavy Vote

That the presidential election was the main factor in the record-breaking vote cast at last Tuesday's election is graphically shown by a study of the complete count of the Marion county vote as completed by counting boards yesterday. The last precinct board reported at noon yesterday, 49 hours after the close of the polls. The highest vote of the whole ballot was cast in the presidential race. For the five candidates a total count of 26,038 was registered, representing a 73.7 per cent vote of the county's 35,327 registered voters to set an all-time high for number of votes cast in a county election.

No other candidate won as close to the presidential total except the United States senatorial vote which was only 402 behind the record. All other votes were lower, showing a lack of voter interest in the candidates or a
