Debaters of W. U. Head South Today

Three Teams to Compete in Coast Contests at Los Angeles Meet

Six Willamette university debaters will leave at noon today for Los Angeles where they will participate in the Pacific coast forensic tournament. Members of the teams to make the trip are Randall Kester and Lawrence Morley, Marjorie Thorne and Helen Mae Beal, Oldus Smith and Albert Klassen.

This will be the last year of debating for Marjorie Thorne, Randall Kester and Lawrence Morley. Helen Mae Beal and Oldus Smith have had previous experience and Albert Klassen is an experienced debater from Dallas.

The debates are held preliminary to the Western Association of Teachers of Speech convention. On Monday there will be six rounds of debate judged by student opponents and four on Tuesday before any eliminations are made. Tuesday's debates will be judged by faculty and outside persons.

This is the largest tournament on the Pacific coast with seven states represented and 25 schools registered. The best men's and women's team on the Pacific coast will be picked to compete with the midwestern team for the national championship. Kester and Klassen will enter the extemporaneous contest.

Professor Herbert Rahe will accompany the teams south. Alternates for the trip are Katherine Ringe and Waldo Hebert.

Salvation Army's Kettles Out Soon

Relief Requests Cited by Leader; Response to Drive Is Short

With a budget less than one-half raised, the Salvation Army here is confronted with the difficult problem of caring for a continuous stream of needy people for whose aid there is no public provision. Adjutant John Allen reported yesterday. The Army raised only $1500 from its recent drive for $3000 for the coming year's activities.

"Families who do not come under the present relief setup, transients trying to get back home, often women with children: These are the cases confronting us daily," the adjutant said. "They arrive in the city late at night, cold and hungry. The police department has no place to put them; so they call on the Army."

Among other cases, Allen cited "young men from broken homes set adrift, seeking here and there for work until they have no legal place of residence."

"Whatever one may choose to think or say, the fact remains that they are very human and in need," Allen added. "The Army does not believe in encouraging idleness or drifting but feels a real Christian interest in their welfare."

The Army at present needs to have its supply of clothing, canned goods and bedding replenished, he said, and soon it will place its Christmas kettles on the streets to raise funds for Yule time relief. Persons having articles to donate may telephone 9437 and a representative of the Salvation Army will call.

Depoe Bay Heroes To Be Paid Honor

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Plans to erect a monument to two Depoe Bay youths who gave their lives in attempting to save persons on a stranded fishing boat went forward today under the sponsorship of a committee from the Portland chamber of commerce.

Jack Chambers and Roy Bower were drowned several weeks ago near Depoe Bay. Their boat overturned while they were attempting to pilot to port a craft on which were Eugene McWilliams, his son, Walter, 14, and Gene McLaughlin, 14, of Salem.

The McWilliams boat's compass was disabled and the trio was lost in the fog. They arrived safely ashore, however, after death overtook the two men who tried to help them.
