Jewelry Case Is Filed Here

Aiken Firm Says Property Now Held by Boesch Illegally Taken

Suit for the return of $650 worth of watches, watch crystals, springs and other jewelry was filed in circuit court yesterday against H. M. Boesch by R. C. Aiken, Inc.

The complaint alleges that the property was wrongfully taken by Warren Jensen, now deceased, on or about December 7, 1935, when Jensen was employed in the plaintiff's store. The defendant is alleged to have received it from Jensen.

The plaintiff states that the defendant refuses to return the goods although demand has been made upon him for them. Return of the goods is asked in the complaint, or their value of $650 and an additional $150 damages which the plaintiff alleges to have suffered by the withholding of the property.

In the answer filed by Ladd and Bush bank to the foreclosure complaint of the Federal Land bank of Spokane against Carl H. Johnson, the claim of the bank for $2070 is set up as superior to all claims except that of the plaintiff bank. The federal bank brought action for collection of $7172. Ladd and Bush ask that any balance above the lien of the plaintiff be applied to their note.

Woodyard's Band At Moon Tonight

Tonight at the Mello Moon, Bart Woodyard, popular Pacific coast dance maestro will present his famous orchestra probably for the last time before leaving for the Cosmopolitan hotel in Denver where he will play during the winter season. He has recently concluded engagements at the Alexander Young hotel in Honolulu and the Multnomah in Portland.

Featuring the distinctly different style of music arrangements, Woodyard's popularity with the dance-goers up and down the Pacific coast has grown rapidly. Many novel effects are obtained through the use of freak instrumental combination including two bass clarinets, celeste, four brass, viola and flutes.

Woodyard is fortunate in having the finest two-piano team on the Pacific coast and features Harold Kassebaum and Clarence Wenger, formerly of Salem, in many of his numbers. Vocalists are petite Barbara Berry and smiling Ed Perry.

Director Named—A. Blankenship was yesterday named a director of the Salem Heights school district by Mary L. Fulkerson, county school superintendent. He will succeed Cleve Bartlett who has moved to Montana.

New State Police Office Completed

Staff Here Will Move to Headquarters in Road Shop Building Soon

The new state police patrol offices in the highway department's sign shop and office building near the state penitentiary were nearly ready for occupancy yesterday. Captain Walter Lansing said he hoped to move records and equipment from the old offices in the city hall within a few days.

The new patrol station will be located in the building farthest eastward in the highway shops group, across Pen road from the state prison. A decided improvement over the crowded city hall quarters, the new offices will be well-lighted, with indirect lighting at night and noise will be minimized by insulating composition walls and ceilings.

The sergeants' office and service counter will be located at the northwest corner of the building in a room 19 by 16 feet in size. Immediately to the rear will be a large office for Captain Lansing and Lieutenant Max Alford, equipped with securely-built storage lockers for rifles, ammunition and other valuable supplies. A third room to the rear will house the new state short wave radio station. A 135-foot steel tower already has been erected nearby to support the vertical antenna.

The patrol office at the new location will be connected with the telephone switchboard in the state headquarters offices in the Oregon building downtown.

'Strike Sufferer' Is in Salem Jail

Walter Williams, against whom a secret grand jury indictment was returned Wednesday, was in the county jail yesterday charged with non-support. He was arrested by state police in Portland and returned here at 3 o'clock Friday morning.

Williams received considerable publicity and sympathy in Portland as a typical sufferer from the strike. A picture was printed in a Portland newspaper showing him with his family. The only hitch was that the woman and baby in the picture were not his family. His wife had filed charges against him here for non-support and an indictment had been returned against him.

When representatives of the Oregon City sheriff's office attempted to serve the warrant on Williams at the farm of Gustaf Sallor near Molalla where Williams had been working they found the man gone. Then came the publication of the Portland picture, recognition and the arrest by the state police.

Statesman Policy Payments Listed

Two more checks, representing benefits from The Statesman one dollar insurance policy, were forwarded yesterday by The Statesman to policy holders who were injured this fall in automobile accidents.

E. R. Mason of Chemawa, who recently was paid $1000 under one of these policies held by his wife who was killed in an automobile accident in Idaho September 2, received an additional $68.57, covering his own injuries in the same accident.

Raymond Stephens of Dayton, injured about five weeks ago in an accident in Ellensburg, Wash., will receive a check for $55 to cover four weeks total disability, of which time two weeks were spent in the hospital.

The dollar accident policies issued by The Statesman to its subscribers are with the North American Accident Insurance company.

List of Needy Is Given by Alliance

The Oregon Workers Alliance grievance committee yesterday issued a list of nine individuals or families who are unable to obtain aid through regular relief channels although, the committee claims, they are in need of food, clothing and employment. Some are ineligible because they came to Oregon too recently to meet residence requirements for regular relief. The list follows:

Ed Drager, Turner route two, eight in family; J. W. Albritton, West Salem, four in family; Cecil, 17, and Howard Harper, 19, sleeping in auto at 446 Union; Layton Clark, two in family; Jesse Agan, 219 Court, three in family; Levi Hefly, postoffice box 441, single; Andrew Flath, Gervais, 10 in family; Ray Smith, Kingwood, six in family; B. F. Sparks, route three, eight in family.

The committee asked that people having work or other aid for these cases notify the alliance at 338 North High street.
