Traffic Code Test Avoided

Huth Pleads Guilty, Pays $15 Fine; Drunk Driver Gets Usual Penalty

The Phil Huth reckless driving case failed to go to trial on scheduled yesterday afternoon when Municipal Judge A. Warren Jones accepted a plea of guilty and a recommendation from City Attorney Paul R. Hendricks that the defendant be fined $15. Huth's attorney had threatened to take the case to circuit court on an appeal, contending the city traffic code was invalid and Hendricks had threatened to have the charge transferred to justice court to be prosecuted under the state law.

Judge Jones imposed a $100 fine on Huth when he pleaded guilty to drunken driving. In addition to receiving a 30-day suspended jail sentence, Huth was placed on one year's probation and his driver's license was suspended for one year.

Complaint for $1400 damages was filed in circuit court yesterday by Anton Rothenfluch against Clement Duda, executor of the estate of Frank Duda. The plaintiff is seeking damages for the alleged improper drying of hops by the deceased Frank Duda. A trial of the same case was ready to start in circuit court recently but was held up when it was found the defendant had passed away after the institution of the suit and no substitution for the defendant had been made.

The plaintiff claims that by reason of the deceased's slack drying the hop crop he failed to sell his hops and suffered the loss specified in the complaints. In probate court in connection with the Duda estate objections to the final account of the executor are filed by Rothenfluch on the grounds that his claim is a lawful one, that it has been refused payment and that the estate should not be closed until the damage action is settled.
