

Riggi Blasts Out Decision Over Game Canadian Danny Pahl

Visitor Meets Canvas Twice

Brooks Slugger's Best Is Not Enough; Ed Norris Decisions Curley

Frank Riggi hit Danny Pahl, tough lad from Vancouver, B. C., with everything but the ring posts last night but when the tenth round was over the hard-nails Canadian was still on his feet and still had enough left to knock Riggi down in the tenth. Riggi got the decision, but nearly every round was his, but the fans left the armory talking about the tough guy from Canada who had taken everything Riggi had to offer and come back for more.

Riggi had him flat on the canvas in the eighth and on his knees in the ninth but both times the fighting fool from across the border staggered to his feet and turned in Riggi's direction for more of the Italian's rocking blows.

Riggi, getting in his powerful left more often than ever before, started out from the first in whirlwind fashion and it looked as if the fight couldn't last more than a couple of rounds.

Nothing Stops Him
He couldn't seem to faze the big boy, though, no matter how hard he hit him. In the fifth Riggi sank a blow that should have killed off most any fighter but Pahl merely staggered and started in again moving toward Riggi. Throughout the fight it was he who kept moving in, moving in.

Pahl wasn't without a few punches of his own. He whaled one into Riggi in the fifth that made the Italian look green about the gills and for about every eighth hard blow that Riggi landed the Canadian would come back with a shocker. Riggi had no easy time of it.

Fans began to grab their coats in the eighth when Riggi landed a short left to the side of the jaw and dropped Pahl flat on the canvas. But the tough lad got up on all fours, shook his head and came to his feet on the count of nine. Riggi unleashed a savage attack of rights and lefts that swung Pahl's head from side to side but he weathered out the round.

Goes Down Again
With the first blow of the ninth round Riggi put Pahl on the canvas again. This time he went only to his knees and was up again on the nine count and more heading for Riggi and more punishment, punishment he didn't seem to even feel.

Riggi tried hard to make it a knockout in the tenth but all he got was a surprise when Pahl landed one that sent Riggi momentarily to his knees.
It was a fast, hard fight all the way.
Eddie Norris, 134-pound Salem

Freshmen Top Frantz' Quint

Sparks' Bearkittens Take 47-25 Victory Though Behind at Start

Playing a slow, methodical game throughout, Coach Lestle Sparks' Willamette freshmen hoed, squared and scored the St. Helens high school five by a 47-25 count Friday night on the Willamette floor. The losers grabbed an early lead but couldn't match the pace of the ball-hawking Bearkittens paced by brilliant pair of forwards, Cecil Tussotto and Buzz Hagedorn who accounted for 28 points between them.
The St. Helens lads, coached by Eddie Frantz, ex-Bearcat star, evidently were off because their shower of shots at the basket netted slight results.
For the Bearkittens, Hagedorn, with 16 points, stood out, while Mason was the outstanding St. Helens man.
Score at halftime favored the frosh, 28 to 12. Score:

At the same time Russell explained that this does not represent the full amount of hunting and fishing licenses sold during this time, but only for those sold through his office, as there are a number of other places throughout the county where these licenses are obtainable.
It was also stated that the report which was sent in response to an unprecedented early call from the commission was unexpected, but that he takes it that no more fishing or hunting licenses may be issued from his office until the 1937 blanks are received.
The report shows that the clerk's office received 27 of 69 hunting licenses; $12 for 12 county hunting license; $11 for 11 county angling licenses; $243 for 81 angler's licenses; $225 for 45 combination licenses; $7 for seven special licenses (vacation); and $3 for one non-resident license.
