Difference Between Work Insurance and Old Age Provisions Shown

James R. Peebles, in charge of the Portland ofice of the social security board, and C. W. Olson, of the Portland office o the internal revenue bureau, discussed the new social security act at the Rotary club Wednesday and answered questions as to its requirements. Mr. Peebles is a former Salem boy, a graduate of Salem high school, and was introduced by a former classmate, A. A. Guef-

Peebles praised the postoffice department for its work in enrolling 26,000,000 persons under the new old age annuities plan. The Oregon enrollment was about 150,000. He said a branch office would be maintained in Salem. All employes are under civil service. The organization will be the largest "insurance" operation in existance.

Olson took up the tax features of the act. For the unemployment part the employer pays 1 per cent of his total payroll of 1936. This must be paid to the collector of internal revenue by January 31, 1937, with a deduction, however. of 90 per cent of the sum paid to Oregon under the state act. The federal act applies to concerns with eight or more employes, but with corporations officers count as employes whether they draw salaries or not. The state act gets down to concerns with four employes or more. For 1937 payrol! the rate will be two per cent. This tax is not charged to em-

The tax is to be paid monthly. No benefits will go to those now over 65; and after January 1, 1942 benefits will go to persons over 65 only in proportion to their contribution to the fund. The benefits will range from $10 a month to $85 a month. Mr. Olson stated that a regulation has been made by the government that employes working on commission would be considered salaried employes under the
