

State College Signup Gains

Old Records Topped; Sale of Beer Would Be Put Under Ban, Plan

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, Jan. 5.—All previous first day enrollment figures at Oregon State were topped yesterday when 3346 students registered and paid their fees for the coming term. This total is also higher than the first day of regular registration last term when 3293 enrolled. Because late registration for the winter term is not usually as high as that of the fall term, it is doubtful that the final count will equal last term's record of 3786.

The freshman class, the only one showing a decrease, had 135 fewer students than at the same time last term. There was also noted a decrease in the number of women signing up the first day, thus making a smaller proportion for the co-eds. The division is now 2261 men and 1085 women. There were 2176 men and 1117 women the first day last term.

Engineering School Leads

The school of engineering still leads the schools in enrollment, having 637 signed up. The school of agriculture strengthened its second place rating by enrolling 501 the first day. Forestry enrolled 448, secretarial science 395, science 356, education 297 and pharmacy 95. These figures are all from 1933 and are well above last year's totals for the various schools.

$24,525 Damages Asked, Suit Here

Fred Legge Files Action Against L. A. Steeves in Circuit Court

Alleging gross negligence in treatment of injuries sustained when he fell at his home September 6, 1935, Fred A. Legge, Salem architect, yesterday filed a suit for $24,525 damages against Dr. Lehan A. Steeves. The plaintiff states that he will be permanently disabled and handicapped because of the alleged improper treatment.

The complaint sets out that after the plaintiff fell and injured his right side, the defendant was called to attend him and that only a partial examination was made at that time and splints applied to the right and side. Nothing further was done until the following day when the defendant again came and dressed the wounds.

On September 9, the plaintiff declared, he was taken to the hospital where an X-ray of the wrist showed that it had been fractured but says that no investigation was made of the hip though later it was also found to be fractured.

Legge states that he has been an architect for 30 years and has made from $2500 to $6000 a year during that time. He states that because of the improper healing of his injuries he will be unable to practice his profession for which he earns $30,000. He seeks $4000 for loss of work already sustained and $525 for nurses' fees and x-ray treatments necessitated by the accident.

Construction of Direct Road Between Clatsop, Fort Stevens to Start gin a winter-long task of connecting Camp Clatsop and Fort Stevens with a direct road tomorrow. Completion of the five-mile stretch will permit movement of equipment between the two major Columbia river ports during national guard training periods without adding to the congestion of the main highway.

Teachers Offered Lettering Course

New classes in lettering and poster making are being provided for teachers of the Salem public schools, according to Earl Litt-willer, county supervisor of adult education. The course begins with simple lettering and progresses through the more difficult styles and finally leads up to brush work which involves the use of colors and the more complicated lay-outs. If after the completion of this eight-weeks course, more instruction may be desired, a new course in brush lettering will probably be offered.

One of these classes meets at the Bush school on Tuesday afternoons, 4 to 5:30, and the other at Parrish junior high school at the same hours on Wednesdays.

The sign writing classes at the senior high school continues on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights as usual.
