tion. The measure would make it illegal for any appointive state officer, board member or commissioner to be removed unless cause was shown—in circuit court if an appeal was made.

The group went on record as favoring closing of all coastal streams in Oregon, with the exception of the Columbia river, to commercial fishing. The ban would not be in effect where the outlet to the sea is more than 400 feet wide. This distance, it was felt, would make closure of the entire stream by net impossible.

Also approved was a proposed bill to create a state purification board, which would adjudge and enforce all streams and river pollution laws. It was accepted only on condition that the standards of what illegal pollution is be definitely outlined in the bill.

The proposed measure authorized the board to judge any private individual, corporation or municipality guilty of illegal practices, and likewise gives it authority to enforce it by levying a severe fine.

Matt Corrigan, president of the state Izaak Walton League, of Portland, was elected permanent chairman of the convention, and Ben Cleggatt, secretary.

Ebbinger's bill did not win full approval from the assembled sportsmen, largely because of its all-inclusive nature.

Another proposed amendment to the constitution was brought forward by Ed F. Averill, president of the council. Averill's bill, which he presented to the group in printed form, called for the creation of a state game commission by appointment by the governor following the "authoritative recommendation" of the game, the state forestry board and the game management division of the state college.

Averill's bill provided that no member of the game commission be removed from office during the term for which appointed except for cause.

Both bills were referred to a committee of five, which will consider them before urging one or the other or a substitute bill on the legislature which convenes next Monday.

to $1,600,000 in improvements to the Salem water system, is just three jumps ahead of the rest of the country.

Abrams also pointed out that building has been slowed and retarded by the federal government, which he said would continue to be a large factor during the present year.

One of the first problems facing him in developing the property just purchased will be the supplying of city water to that tract. He pointed out that the city water department does not lay mains to property outside the city limits and that he would have to install his own system on the land before development could take place. He said he is working at the present time on the problem of supplying water.

G-Men Probe Theory Kidnap Used Boat

This diagram accurately pictures the grounds and surroundings of the Mattson estate in Tacoma, Wash., where 19 year old Charles Mattson was seized by a lone kidnaper. Dotted line shows the route taken by the abductor and his victim toward the shore road, where marks indicated a car had been parked. G-men believe the escape route was designed to permit speedy departure by a "mystery boat" on Commencement Bay (background). Crosses indicate places where investigators found marks left when the kidnaper dragged the boy down the trail.—International Illustrated News Photo.

Labor Lobby Here Plan at Portland

Salem Delegation Asserts Need to Avoid Action to Curb Unions

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 5.—(P)—A three-point program designed to thwart possible anti-labor measures at the forthcoming session of the state legislature won the endorsement of the Portland central labor council today.

The resolution called for a progressive legislative program, the promotion of a farmer-labor bloc to oppose anti-labor legislation, and for consideration of a plan to send a labor lobby to Salem.

The action followed presentation of recommendations by a delegation from the Salem central labor council.

The resolution suggested "a permanent organization to fight for labor and social legislation and to further independent political action." It was pointed out that other affiliates of the American Federation of Labor have endorsed farmer-labor movements and called for a state-wide conference of farmer and labor legislators to consider "a serious situation" existing at Salem.

The Salem delegation urged the Portland group to hold a series of public meetings designed to arouse sentiment against possible measures to curb union activities.

Ice, Snow Bring Winter to Oregon

The mercury slumped well below freezing in Portland tonight, with prospects it might reach the 20-degree mark. Ice remained on lawns and streets in the higher levels.

Blizzards and near-blizzards raged in mountain areas. Storm warnings flew on the coast. Storm winds blanketed widely scattered areas from the mid-Columbia to Klamath Falls, as well as in the east around Pendleton.

SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 5.—(P)—A blizzard swirled snow through the Inland Empire last night and today to blockade country roads with snow and close schools.

Two Men Report Holdup Attempts

Two holdups at widely separated points of the city were reported to police last night, first such crias to be reported for several months.

Raymond Cook, 460 Bush street, reported that he was held up at the point of a gun at Leslie and South Church street but that the stick-up artist obtained nothing for his trouble.

H. J. Harold, 849 North Liberty street, was stopped at Division and Liberty streets.

Progressives to Seek Recognition

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(P)—Progressives and farmer-laborites in the house of representatives joined forces today in a bid for equal recognition with republicans as a minority party.

At the same time they proposed a political realignment which leaders hoped would be a powerful factor in the 1940 elections.

"We take our stand for progress, for peace, for plenty, and we wish to join hands with all those who are going our way," said a statement issued by Rep. Schneider (prog.-Wis.), the group's unsuccessful candidate for house speaker.

Cherrians Crown Gueffroy as King

Nine Neophytes Ascend Cherry Tree; Nobles Also Are Inducted

A. A. Gueffroy was officially inducted and crowned King King of the Cherrians last night before a gathering of 100 of his "subjects" who met at the Marion hotel.

Gueffroy, in accepting the crown and scepter, hoped for a prosperous year. He said he would announce the year's program at an early meeting.

The council of nobles inducted into their high-sounding offices along with the King King are: Lord governor wood, Deryl F. Myers; chancellor of the rolls, R. Wilson; keeper of the orchards, E. H. Bingenheimer; king's jester, Kenneth Perry; Duke of Lambert, F. B. Moxley; Queen Anne's consort, Gardner Knapp; Archbishop of Bickreall, Leif Bergqvist; Marguis of Marachino, Don Deckerbach; Earl of Waldo, Frank Chapman.

Nine Neophytes were initiated into the order. They include Glen W. Stevens, George A. Rhoten, M. F. Hendrick, A. C. Lovring, Frank Chattas, Connie Frigaard, Carl H. Cover, John R. Ibbot and Cephus Starr. Earl W. Snell, secretary of state, who was to have been initiated, was called out of the city.

300 Inmates Now Not Employed
The report showed that out of 1000 men in the penitentiary 420 are productively employed while 320 are engaged in prison maintenance assignments. About 200 men have no work.

"A serious situation is developing at the girls industrial school," the report read. "We have eight women, 18 years of age and over, are now quartered among young offenders."

"This practice is certain to work havoc with the girls' institution if it does not make the state a party to contributing to the delinquency of the younger girls."

The law provides that in cases of vacancies in the senate and house they shall be filled by the county courts of the counties from which they were elected.

State department records show that both Strayer and Pearson held notarial commissions while serving in the legislature. Lessard, Strayer and Pearson are hold over senators.

Lessard will be represented in the supreme court by Elton Watkins, Portland attorney, while Ralph E. Moody, assistant attorney general, will appear for the secretary of state.

BAKER, Jan. 5.—(P)—W. H. Strayer of Baker county, dean of the Oregon senate, will be in Salem when the legislature convenes Monday regardless of Secretary of State Earl Snell's action in declaring his seat vacant.

Strayer said he considered himself a member until the senate credentials committee ruled otherwise.

Flu Epidemic in Rockies Takes 88

DENVER, Jan. 5.—(P)—Influenza and pneumonia, which have caused at least 88 deaths and sent hundreds of persons to hospitals during the past three weeks, continued prevalent in the Rocky mountain area tonight.

In Denver, Carl Schwab, manager of health, termed the influenza outbreak as "epidemic." The city health department reported 55 deaths for the week ended at noon yesterday either from pneumonia or influenza or a combination of both. Seventeen of the deaths came in the last 24 hours of the period, Schwab said.

leave the country before congress can act, though the legislation will be introduced tomorrow.

President Roosevelt disclosed that one of the first jobs he will put up to congress will be the re-organization of government functions.

He said he would send a special message on the subject to both houses next Tuesday. With it will go a 125-page report of a special presidential committee which has been surveying the question.

The chief executive has indicated that the major gain to be expected of any reorganization was not economy, but an efficient working machine.

With brief sessions, conducted between crescendoes of conversation, both houses today perfected the machinery for rushing the new neutralization measure to enactment, for receiving President Roosevelt's annual message in joint session tomorrow, and pursuing the year's legislative program.

All Counties in Extension Plan

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, Jan. 5.—Every county in Oregon has agreed to cooperate financially with Oregon State college's federal cooperative extension work for the coming year.

F. L. Ballard, vice director of extension, announced today to William A. Schoenfeld, dean and director of agriculture.

"This is the first time that any state extension service west of the Mississippi river has enjoyed the help of all the counties of its state where financial arrangements are voluntary on the part of the county officers," Ballard told Dean Schoenfeld.

The re-establishment of county agent work in Josephine county through provision by that county's court and the addition of this work for the first time by Harney county now, for the first time, brings all of Oregon's 38 counties within direct cooperation.
