Cheesemakers and Vikings Play Here, Bearcats Meet Wolves

Rarey's Quint Always Tough

Tourney Nemesis Returns; Salem Undefeated But Needs to Improve

Coach Harold Hauk's Viking cagers, as yet undefeated, run up against an outfit that has rarely failed to give them neck and neck competition when they meet the Tillamook Cheesemakers on the Viking floor at 8 o'clock tonight.

Coach Russ Rarey's quints, al-ways fast and aggressive, have spelled trouble for Salem in the past and last year gave the Vi-kings a major headache when they boosted them out of championship class in Salem's first game of the state tournament.

Hauk's quintet, sparked by two speedy forwards, Tom Medley and Sumner Gallaher, has turned in four wins in the yet young hoop campaign. The Vikings won from Medford, a team they will meet twice again this weekend, 24 to 17 last week.

Improvement Sought
Although pleased with the win over the Tigers, Coach Harold Hauk found plenty to be dissatisfied with in the Viking showing. Salem missed 16 out of 22 free throws and us slow in noticing scoring openings.

Recently, during the annual conference of football coaches and officials, Chet Wynne, Kentucky mentor, made a somewhat startling statement.

Hitting the pass interference of ficials to penalize teams so freely, Chet averred that referees are often unconsciously prejudiced by their preconceived notions as to the better team, and instinctively favor their choice when making decisions. This raises the interesting question of how big a part the judgment of officials which there wasn't dissension over the verdict rendered in at least one of the bouts of the night.

The fight game affords an A No. 1 example of a sport in which the official whose judgment of the verdict as to the winner official is really king. Barring a knockout, the verdict as to the winner of the decides which way a game will go. The old cry of "kill the umpire" is still a familiar yodel in the various ball parks, which is evidence enough that baseball's officials are not infallible, either.
