Lieutenant Governor and Unicameral Schemes Fail in Senate

Members' Pay Boost Out Too The Lobby

Public Spared Decisions on Three Issues; 24 New Bills Appear

The senate guillotine was in good working order Friday. Its sharpened blade descended on some of the pet ideas for Oregon's governmental reform. Executed by the route of indefinite postponement were resolutions to set up a one-house legislature; to create the office of lieutenant governor; to pay legislators $8 per diem. All of these would have required submission of constitutional amendments to the people The senate killed the legislative brain-children in their infancy.

Senator Strayer, chairman of the resolutions committee, was lord high executioner. On the Carney resolution for a one-house legislature Strayer declared Oregon should wait to see how Nebraska's experiment came out: "This is no time to adopt such a revolutionary change in Oregon's legislature."

Senator Stringer also pleaded for delay to observe the working of the plan in Nebraska. Inefficient, Claim

Senator Carney, whose resolution would have established a legislature with from 30 to 36 members, called the present system inefficient and cumbersome. Senator Staples, whose resolution to amputate the lower house was also defeated, said results would be more satisfactory if only one house sat.

On the lieutenant governor bill Strayer again led the opposition, saying he would rather have some presidents of the senate than some of the governors who had been elected.

Watching from the gallery of the house yesterday was William Graham, assistant insurance commissioner. He was taking in all the moves going on down on the floor, undoubtedly thinking of past sessions when he led 'many of the floor fights.

Cigarettes and cigars play their part in the legislative deliberations but there is another measure of the extent of committee work. As the session grows older, it is th doodles, circles, squares, checks and pictures, on the table tops that show the strain the legislators are under as they study some new law.

Some of the legislators with spirits wounded by the blunt message of the governor, asked Attorney General Moody to draft a resolution of censure for them. Moody pointed to them the provision of the constitution authorizing the gov-ernor to address his views on legislative matters to the as-

Lincoln Declared Democracy Savior

Chancellor Hunter Speaks at Joint Session to Honor Birthday

Taking time out from their deliberations yesterday members of the house and senate met in joint session to observe ceremonies commemorating the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. F. M. Hunter, chancellor of higher education, was the principal speaker on the program, which was attended by Governor

Hunter pointed to Lincoln as the greatest exponent and leader of the "American brand of demecracy," this country has ever known.

Martin.

"He was the saviour and rescurer of that brand of democracy." Hunter said, "Today we are faced with another test. Europe has surrendered to the monster of dictatorship. The last stand of democracy is in America. I am not sure that we are going to be wise enough to meet the test."

Hunter declared Lincoln knew that education was the basis for the satisfactory operation of a democracy and pointed to the fact that it was under his administration that the land grant act for colleges was passed. The Salem Woman's club trio and the Salem high school band also appeared on the program.

Support Is Urged

All organizations and groups which will be affected by the proposed Willamette valley project of flood central, irrigation, drainopment, should have representation at the hearing here February 25, Vernon L. Irish, Salem real estate dealer, told the Salem realty board at its luncheon Friday noon.

Following an explanation by Mr. Irish as to what the project is expected to mean eventually, in-cluding irrigation of 375,000 acres and an expenditure of $75,000,000 although the present contemplated unit calls for only $2,430,000, the realty board took action to assure representation at the hearing.

The board's legislative committee together with five members added for this special project, was designated by President William McGilchrist Jr. to act in the
