

Evangelical Church at Albany Will Observe 66th Anniversary

Full Program Planned Today

Congregation Organized in 1871 at Baber Home; 10 on Charter

ALBANY, March 5.—Sunday, March 7, will be the 66th anniversary of the founding of the Evangelical church of Albany, and the event will be observed with fitting ceremonies by the church congregation. A basket dinner is to be part of the day's program and will be served in the social hall of the church. Services will be held in the church during the day in keeping with the occasion.

The Evangelical church was organized here in 1871 at the home of G. W. Baber, with 10 charter members. At that time it was the only Indiana conference and Rev. D. S. Oakes was appointed to this field. After serving until December 1873, Rev. Oakes became discouraged and returned to Indiana, and Rev. J. Bowersox served the field until 1875 when he was appointed resident pastor. In addition to this field, Rev. Bowersox also served the Salem district.

Site Building History
The first church building was erected on the present site of the armory. When the ground was desired for the armory building a quarter block was purchased on East First and Pine streets, and the new church edifice was erected there. Later the church was enlarged, a passage way built and a hall added. A social hall where all social affairs of the church take place, was erected.

Rev. E. C. Hicks is the present pastor.

"Luxury Model"

By MAY CHRISTIE

Jimmy badly and wrote him regularly.

From the School of Architecture, Eugene, he had the address of the Paris tailor where he now worked and studied. She sent her letters there, and assured herself that she would receive in return several long letters from Jimmy. But time passed and there wasn't one word from him. She was amazed.

"Jeemy, he do not write you? But that is ter-r-rible!" Yvonne assumed false sympathy. Luana could not guess that Yvonne had commandeered his first three letters, read them and tore them up.

"Oh, there'll be some on the next boat," Luana said airily, though she was worried.

When the next boat docked, she was to be gone forever from the apartment she shared with the Franch girl.

Thus did it happen: Armand had called one evening for Yvonne. Deliberately he came rather early, knowing Yvonne was doing some shopping before she came to the apartment, and hoping to find Luana alone. He did. He started to make love to her, verbally, and was snubbed.

Enormously conceited, and believing himself irresistible, the idea struck him that he might use caveman tactics with the aloof one, and grabbed her in his arms and tried to kiss her.

Using her latchkey, Yvonne walked in on them at that moment.

Yvonne's jealousy and suspicions had been simmering for a long time. She lost entire control of herself and made a shocking scene.

Her nerves still shaky from her illness, Luana answered back with a denunciation of Armand, bone of contention, that was far from flattering to the little Frenchman.

"That wormal As though I'd touch him with a ten-foot pole!" She was trembling with anger at the injustice of Yvonne's accusations. Flinging prudence to the winds, she made bad worse by adding: "Why, he's such a sneaky little rat that he makes love to every woman that crosses his path! Are you blind? Can't you see how I loathe him?"

That was a new enemy made. Armand changed camp. His self-love was deeply offended.
