Planned

CT. PATRICK'S day is one that's deal for party giving, entertainment is easy to plan, and the Irish theme fun to follow. Symbols of superstition, snakes, green color, and potatoes are traditional motifs for St. Patrick's day

The first game to plan, is based on the story about the good saint being sold into slavery and caring for pigs for seven years. This game is similar to pinning the tail on the donkey except that a sheet of paper is hung on the wall, with a border drawn on it representing the pen. Pig silhouettes are cut out, and blindfolded players are supposed to pin the pig in the pen. A "hunt for luck" may be staged, and guests seek little gift packages that contain blarney stones, clay pipes, potatoes, shamrocks and paper snakes. Soap bubble blowing with clay pipes, with prizes offered for the largest, or the one that stays whole the longest is always funeven for grownups.

Potato races, blowing green balloons into a pen made of kindling; piled snake-fence fashion; and other games of the same type may easily be adapted to St. Patrick'

Refreshments might be served in small lunch pails, marked "Paddy's Grub," and include sandwiches, cakes and tin cups for coffee. Ice cream cones make dessert for such a menu.

Decorations can be anything green, but harps, potatoes, horseshoes, pipes, shamrocks, snakes and any other good luck symbols are traditionally appropriate to the occasion.

Walnut oil is imported from France and costs plenty. It's used for salad dressings just like olive oil. Home grown walnuts finely ground would add a great deal to the flavor of salad dressings and add little to the cost of the dish.

The kind of forescreen that rolls up like a window shade is handy and attractive to own.
