Cleveland Centennial Suggests Comparison

Grover Cleveland

Mrs. Preston widow of Cleveland

President Roosevelt

Celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Grover Cleveland on March 18 suggests an interesting comparison of his career and that of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Both entered politics in New York state as reform candidates and both became national figures as governor of the Empire state. Both stepped from the governorship to the presidency despite Tammany. And both, carried to the White House on waves of popular reaction to economic and social chaos following a great war, faced depression problems. But there the parallel ceases. Cleveland adhered to a set of fixed concepts, followed an economy program, believed that the government was not obligated to assume duties of social welfare. Roosevelt has followed an experimental program which has rolled up the national debt and greatly expanded the functions of the federal government.

Lanny Ross says: "Luckies never bother my throat in the least"

"I've been enjoying Luckies for a long while now. They're a light smoke and they never bother my throat in the least... and that goes for my voice too. I guess everyone knows that it takes a good many hours of rehearsal to produce an hour of show... especially with a program like the new 'Show Boat'. But I wonder if they realize what a wonderful feeling it is to relax for a while, forget all about work, and smoke a Lucky."

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Mr. Ross verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.
