

Corn Is Star In Day's Mart

Skyrockets 3/8c Bushel and Takes Wheat on Upgrade Too

CHICAGO, March 25—(AP)—Suddenly outdoing high price records of the last 10 years, corn became the grain trader's star performer today, and soared 3/8 cents a bushel.

Largely because of buoyancy of corn values, wheat rallied from earlier price setbacks, and in some cases finished with material net gains. Corn reacted a little just before business ended for the day.

At the close, the corn market was 2-2/3 cents a bushel higher than 24 hours previous, May $1.14 1/4, July $1.09 3/4, September $1.03 3/4, 1.04; wheat advanced 1 cent higher, May $1.40 3/4, September $1.23 3/4, oats 3/4 up, May 47 1/4, and rye varying from 1/4 loss to 3/4 advance, May $1.12. The provisions outcome was unchanged to 7 cents dearer.

Buying of corn futures today was the most general witnessed in a long while, and purchases for immediate shipment from here were the largest in more than two years.

Giving impetus to the upward sweep of the corn market was an official forecast of higher prices on hogs and cattle this summer.

Wheat and rye during much of the day were dominated by profit taking sales on the part of recent buyers.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to upturns of hog values and of corn.

Steel Climbs Point at 117

Federal Securities Paler But Corporate Bonds Do Better

NEW YORK, March 25—(AP)—Stocks suffered more from neglect than selling pressure in today's market and, in the slowest session since October 1, last year, the majority dipped fractions to 2 or more points.

The list was moderately active on the upside at the opening, apparently in response to signing of the Chrysler labor armistice, steels and motors, together with some rails and utilities, pushed ahead for a time. But it was not long before they began to give ground.

There was sufficient nibbling at U. S. Steel to enable it to emerge with a net advance of a point at 117.

Average Off 4

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off 4 of a point at 71.3. Transfers amounted to 1,252,440 shares, compared with 1,429,910 yesterday.

In the retreating column were Bethlehem at 95 1/2, American Telephone 169 1/2, Western Union 71, Westinghouse 140 1/2, Southern Pacific 59 1/2, N.Y. Central 50 1/2, Kennecott 61 1/2, Goodyear 42 1/2 and International Harvester 16 1/2.

U. S. government securities lost recovery vigor but corporate bonds did better.

Snyder Will Plant Five Acres of Early Potatoes

AUMSVILLE, March 25—Leslie Snyder is preparing five acres of ground for planting of early potatoes. Inclement weather is proving an obstacle to planting, however. Many acres in this neighborhood are having to be reseeded, due to the freezing of fields down last fall.

Markets Close Today

Principal financial and commodity markets throughout the world, including the New York stock exchange and the Chicago board of trade will be closed tomorrow, Good Friday.

Apples May Give Fuels in Future

Gardeners' and Ranchers' Mart

SPOKANE, Wash., March 24—(AP)—"Men of Magic" described the possibilities of a "synthetic age" drawing its fuel alcohol from waste products of the farm and forest in the closing sessions of this week of the Pacific Northwest Chemurgic conference.

Ernest H. Wiegand, of Oregon State college, said it was possible fuel alcohol could be manufactured from apples without excessive overhead costs.

Out of the Pacific northwest apple tonnage shipments last year, Professor Wiegand said, the canning waste totaled 32,415 tons of sugar. It is this tonnage were converted into absolute alcohol, he said, it would show a possible recovery of 6,426,466 gallons of alcohol suitable for fuel.

The apple report was one phase of the two-day regional study of chemurgic possibilities—the recovery of industrial products from farm crops and forest by-products.

Dr. Hobart Beresford, of the University of Oregon, predicted that farm homes could be heated and lighted by distillation of call potatoes from the storage bins.

Big Soil Signup For Polk County

DALLAS, March 25—What is perhaps the largest and most complete sign-up, according to the size and number of farms in the county, Polk county probably leads all of the Willamette valley counties in the 1937 sign-up under the agricultural conservation program.

Totaling some 15,000 acres and 285 work sheets, the participation is considerably greater than last year, although Polk county led the valley counties in these respects also. As there are about 114,000 acres of crop land in the county, roughly 84 per cent of the farm land is in the 1937 program.

Of the new signers the average size farm per signer is over 50 acres.

Alsike clover planting is scheduled as a practice payment rate of $3 per acre.

Sunrise Services Will Be Held on Easter With Rev. Stanley as Speaker

DAYTON, March 25—The union sunrise Easter services of the Dayton churches will be held at the Baptist church with Rev. Arthur Stanley of the Dayton Christian church in charge.

All Dayton churches will have special Easter services at their regular forenoon worship hour and all the Dayton churches will unite for a union Easter service at the Methodist church in the evening with Captain G. L. Hall of McMinnville the speaker.

"Leisure to Repent" by URSULA PARROTT

SYNOPSIS

Gilbert WYNON had been in love with lovely Denise Rendale from the moment he met her but she had eyes for no one except Keith Sheldie, handsome young playboy. However, Keith had broken up when the irresponsible Keith does not offer to marry Denise upon learning of her father's financial ruin. Keith frankly explained that he was solely dependent upon his wealthy father, and to marry meant being disinherited. Denise's sister, Felicia, suggests that she marry "money" immediately as Felicia herself had done. The latter loved the late Duane Fenton but married the unexciting, though reliable, Eugene Gardiner Days when Duane failed her. When Gilbert proposes, Denise honestly tells him she loves someone else, but accepts him on the condition that the marriage be a formal one and, if at the end of a year she is not happy, he will free her. Keith is disturbed with the news that Denise will go through with it. One day at breakfast, when his father is particularly domineering and disagreeable, Keith queries, "Why do you dislike me so?" "I dislike you because you are soft like your mother," came the reply. When Keith was only a year old, his mother had run away with her music teacher and had died shortly after. Since then the embittered Sheldie, Sr., took his hurt out on his son, bending him to his will and preventing Keith from living his own life. The latter was often fisted with contempt for enduring his father's treatment. At first he stood it for loyalty but, as the years passed, he realized it was because of the money he would inherit. On the morning of the announcement of her state engagement, Felicia was breakfasting in bed, trying not to be annoyed by the click-clack of her husband's riding boot. She had not anticipated how dreary marriage without love could be. Just then Eustace comes into the room and asks, "Look here, Felicia, is this marriage of Denise's going to be all right?"

CHAPTER IX

"I was thinking, Felicia, that Denise is not the sort who should marry without love," Eustace went on.

There! He was shrewd to figure that out. How had he? He saw so little of Denise, she didn't suppose he knew about Keith. She said slowly: "Love has so many definitions."

"No; don't put me off, darling. It seems pretty important."

"Pretty important, too, that Father and Mother shouldn't go bankrupt, Eustace."

"I was afraid that was it."

She did not answer. He looked at her straightly, his gray eyes clear as a child's.

"If you think it's all right—"

"How can one be sure? I think it's sensible."

"Yes. It was sensible of you to marry me, too, instead of Duane. Have you been glad you did, though?"

She was so startled she could not believe she had heard him right. Never since their wedding day had he said anything that indicated he knew she had married him while she loved his reckless cousin.

He said, evenly: "Don't look troubled, my dear. Sometimes, I've just wanted to know if you were really happy. You're so much cleverer than I, and you pretend better. I shouldn't have asked of course."

"You should have asked, if you wanted to know." But she could not, could not keep her voice from shaking, remembering how madly she'd loved Duane, how she had wept, secretly and alone, when he crashed the last of the planes he loved, and died swiftly.

Her husband looked at her. She made herself be steady. Futile to wonder whether she wished she'd shared one year with Duane, instead of having all the other years could bring her—to wonder still whether she wished she had been beside him in that last instant when his plane went down, and he who had so hated loneliness must have been so dreadfully lonely, facing death.

She said, very fast: "I wouldn't have married anyone but you. I'm always glad I'm married to you, Eustace. But he had been wrong in her face, not listening to her words, and he sighed.

"Perhaps Gilbert isn't prepared to keep Denise with such a light rein. That odd phrase caught at her. Yes, he had held her with a very light rein, these three years. Suddenly she said, "And spend it making you happy."

She could not quite repeat, "making you happy." She felt neither happy nor unhappy, only altogether calm, as the days followed each other.

Her marriage was arranged for the week before Thanksgiving. Gilbert would not return until immediately before the wedding. They would sail for the Mediterranean. None of those things seemed either specially important or very real. She grew a little thin, and Felicia's expression, watching her, was sometimes dubious, so that one day Denise said to her: "Don't worry. I'll go through with it, you know—largely because of Mother and Father. They're so pleased."

Felicia just said: "They are, aren't they?"
