Streamlined Grand Opera Proves Successful

Grand opera is experiencing a new deal. Gone are the buxom divas of old, replaced by a new type of sweet and shapely star. The old archaic scenery has been replaced by settings which are modern and realistic. The ballet has been rejuvenated with a flock of new recruits who are attractive in face and figure. Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Josephine Antoinette, Helen Jepson and Grace Moore are among the newer opera headliners who are helping to "streamline" this art. Evidence of the success of this move is seen in the enthusiastic reception given the Metropolitan on its current road tour of Boston, Baltimore, Rochester and Cleveland.
