

Puyallup Berry Men Plan Co-op

Will Enable Men of Both Regions to Cooperate in Holding Price

Prospects are growing brighter that Oregon berry growers' stiffest competitors, Puyallup valley growers, may organize under a plan similar to that of the Oregon Blackberry Control board...

A large crowd of Puyallup growers recently voted unanimously to adopt the Oregon Blackberry Control board's collective bargaining type of organization...

Would Be Aid "Organization of the Puyallup growers would mean a great deal to us," Linfoot said, "because they raise about three times as many berries as we do..."

Plans to incorporate for cooperative bargaining in the Puyallup valley were promoted following a conference at Longview Wash., early this month between the executive board of the Puyallup chapter of the Farm union and members of the Oregon Blackberry Control board...

The Auburn News, after outlining the berry situations in Oregon and Washington, adds that

"with the two states cooperating it is conceded the situation will be better for both growers and packers." Cannermen, the article says, "will be able to maintain prices and the cooperatives will not have to undersell in order to obtain money with which to finance their seasonal operations."
