"The officers make it very plain that they have no 'antilabor' complex," read a statement issued from the secretary's office. "They are friendly to labor and wish to cooperate in every way possible, to the end that friendly relations between the farmer and laborer may continue, without loss of crops, or loss of jobs to the working men and wo-

"Many of those who have demanded the creation of such a collective bargaining medium are alarmed over the possibility of strikes. They have mortgages and taxes due, delinquent, or aiready in various stages of foreclosure. This crop, at current prices, can and will give the farmer and his family their 'pay check' for the years of hard work and long hours put in up to this point. These farmers are desperate. Many crops are extremely perishable, like strawberries. They can and will be picked, canned, and paid

"The farmers propose to pro-tect their homes, their labor, and their crops. . .

"If anyone is going to get a 'corner' or arbitrary control of food, in order to enforce their demands, then it must be the farmer, the producer of that food, who will get his share first, and not last, as has been the case in all too many instances, through lack of such a collective bargain-

Avoiding Delays Is Principal Effort

The association articles state the intention to see "that any and all of the operations necessary in the normal harvesting, transportation, packing, canning, processing, storing, and or marketing activ-Ities of said farm products of the members, and or the farmers or producers of farm products generally may continue uninterrupted pending any and all arbitration, conciliation, or efforts to deter-mine, adjust, settle, or conclude any strike, or other emergency that may arise, and affecting, in particular, perishable, and or seasonable farm products . . Creation of "an effective collective bargaining agency" is proposed as the means to these ends.
