Pickings Lean On Wall Street

Some Brokerage Houses Dissolve Because of Slack Business

NEW YORK, May 31-(A)-Wall street brokers looked back over a lean and hungry month today and pondered what the future held in store.

Share transactions on the stock exchange in May totaled only 18,-562,000 shares, the lowest total since March, 1935. In the bond market, the turnover of $178 .-925,000 face value was a record low since November, 1932.

So persistent has been the sluggishness of the market recently that a few small houses, faced by lack of commissions and a heavy overhead, have decided to dissolve rather than carry on in the hope business will pick up.

Only last week, Allen L. Lindley, chairman of the business conduct committee of the New York stock exchange, dissolved his firm, in existence since 1902, and joined one of the large wire houses as a limited partner.

The old established firm of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., indicating its belief small accounts were uneconomic, announced it would not take margin accounts under $25,000, and would charge advisory service.

Since the decline in trading set in, in February, some other large houses have taken this point of view, have augmented their statistical staffs and gone more effectively into investment advisory service operations.

Not long ago a seat in the exchange sold at $91,000, a new with the high of $187,000 last year. That indicated what the the Heppner section. Rain is broker who bought the seai thought of profit possibilities.

SYNOPSIS

in the world. He visits Dr. Alan Ballard, his father's friend, in the little town of Riverport, to ascertain if the old physician needs an assistant. As luck would have it, the aged doctor is planning to re-tire to California and offers Jonathan his place. Dr. Ballard warns the newcomer not to tread on the toes of Ex-State Senator Sutton, who practically runs the town. Jonathan is to take over in Octobr and will live at the Ballard house, with the stipulation that Evelina, the fussy old housekeeper, must be kept on as the old doctor had promised her a home as long as she lives. Jonathan is sure he is going to like Riverport when he meets Rose Ward, the doctor's niece. As the young couple stroll through the park, Sally Sutton, ritzy daughter of the Senator, rides past. Rose is surprised when the girl greets her but credits it to the ew-man-in-town" influence. Then they meet Bill Lynd, a real estate man, who takes them for a ride.
Bill discloses that "Red" Dexter, brother of Sally's fiance, was expelled from school but plans to return next term. "I hope for your

CHAPTER VI

Jonathan, alighting from the train one cool blue October morning felt as green and raw and uncertain as if Medical Centre, Vienna, and the past summer in Detroit had not existed. He had worked with Doctor Morton and with other im-portant men and had been assured portant men and had been assured that if the Riverport project did not turn out as well as he hoped, there would be a job waiting for him in the West. Just now, standing on the platform, with his luggage about him, he wondered if, given an opportunity, he would not take the first train out again. Not that he had expected a brass hand to meet and expected a brass band to meet im or to meet a queue of anxious patients on his new-rented doorstep. But he had counted on Ballard's hearty friendship and wisdom and advice for at least the first two

A familiar face surmounting a lanky body approached him on a run. It was Pete, the taxi owner. Pete said, "Hey, Doc, been waiting for you," and yawped at an innocent bystander to "give me a hand with them bags." Before Jonathan could draw an adequate breath he was in the cab and on his way to Senator
