British Chancellor Issues State of Gold Policy; Bonds Clipped

NEW YORK, June 8-(AP)-With steels, coppers and specialties in the lead, the stock market crawled into a half-hearted rally today. While gains up to two points were well distributed at the close, losers were rather plen-

The British chancellor of the exchequer helped to ease further the international gold tension by telling the house of commons the government's monetary policy would continue unchanged and wide fluctuations of the yellow metal would not be permitted. The gold price in London was lowered about 4 cents an ounce before the official made his announcement.

Rust Sweeps Wheat Front

Minneapolis Market Jumps 5 Cents Bushel as Loss Threatens

CHICAGO, June 8 .- (AP)-Black rust sweeping northward on a front 125 miles wide and threatening to repeat 1935's wholesale spring crop destruction, whirled wheat prices skyward to-

At Minneapolis, the nation's principal spring wheat marketing center, wheat values skyrocketed five cents a bushel, the extreme immediate permissable limit. Almost four cents bulge was scored in Chicago, where winter wheat rather than spring wheat is chiefly dealt in.

Attacks Best District
Authoritative dispatches said the season's best winter wheat district in Kansas is being at-tacked by the rust, with the quality and yield of the crop there being lowered. At the close, Chicago wheat futures after a day of fast trading were 2%-3% cents above yesterday's finish, July $1.09%-14, Sept. $1.08%-1.09, Dec. $1.10%-%; corn %-2% up, July $1.17%-1.18, Sept. $1.03%-1.04, Dec. 76 1/4-1/5; oats 1 1/4-1 1/6 advanced, July 39 1/4-1/6, and rye showing 1 1/4-2 1/8 bulge, July 88 1/4. The outcome in provisions varied figures to a setback of 22 cents.

Northwest '36 Onion Deal Is Almost Done; Planting 1937 Crops

The northwestern onlon season of 1936 has almost made its exit although a few sacks are yet available from local cold storages. The demand is limited almost entirely for ships supplies or outside camps. New onions have been arriving in heavy volume from California during the past several weeks and replace the demand for the old crop. Planting of the 1937 crop is now taking place and, according to early estimates, may amount to 2.20 acres in Oregon as compared with 1,900 last year and 1,400 acres again this year in Washington. The crop of intermediate onions is expected to be increased from 700 to 800 acres in the vicinity of Walla Walla.

Coming out of the theatre was like old home week. Everyone they encountered knew Rose and almost everyone seemed to know Jonathan, whether he had met them previously or not. In fact, standing under the street light on a very chilly morning one large, overly robust lady exhibited, without shame, a remarkable wart on a Napoleonic nose. "I'm afraid to have it taken off," she sighed. "I don't hold with surgery!" Jonathan started to speak, was furiously pinched by Rose, and Bill Lynd, strolling up, emitted a warning cough. Said Bill calmly, "I'm sure if you'd call at Doctor Kimber's office, Mrs. Fritch—?" and linking his arm through Jonathan's, led him away a step or two, hissing, Sally leaned searer Jonathan and a wave of fragrance, shown the print Dexter, saw the little group. She raised a manicured eyebrow and said something to her companion. Presently she strolled over to them and spoke without removing the long cigarette holder which she held in the corner of her mouth "Hello, Kim," she said, smiling, "I see you've joined the Main Street gang. ... "She looked casually at Rose. "Oh, how are you, Rose!" she added and then, brightening," if it isn't Bill Lynd!"

"It always has been," agreed Bill Dexter, joining them, looked faintly uncomfortable. He hadn't seen Bill Lynd to speak to since an epic hattle which had taken place a good many years before in which young Mr. Dexter had been ignominiously defeated.

Sally, hatless, the mink coat hudded about her, now withdrew the cigarette helder. She said, "We were just going down to Bert's for a sode. I persuaded Phill—by the way, you all know Phil, don't you? You remember him, Kim. He's the young man who wrapped me about the lamp post. This is Doctor Kimber, Phill—he goes around consoling young women who have been in auto secidents... Come on, join us.
