Maude Poulin Wins Damages

$300 Judgment Is Granted Against Gas Company Due to Explosion

The current circuit court trial jury last night brought in its first verdict in favor of a plaintiff when it awarded Maude A. Poulin a $300 judgment against the Portland Gas & Coke company for injuries she suffered when her furnace gas burner exploded. She had asked for $5,152.10 for the accident, which occurred last November 15. The jury was out for two hours.

Earlier this week and jury brought in verdicts for the defendant in the cases of Boles vs. Wilson and Griffin vs. McCaffery. The court will not reconvene until Monday when the jury trial of the case of Rigel vs. Lord will open at 10 a. m. The case of Roseman vs. Putnam, previously scheduled for Monday, has been removed from the present term calendar and no new trial date set.

Roberts Is Taken To Face Charges
M. H. Roberts' trip to Nebraska to face an embezzlement charge, begun yesterday afternoon, will be more like a vacation outing than a dismal journey in the hands of the law, it developed yesterday when Deputy Sheriff Lester Skinner of Cherry county, Nebraska, arrived here to take custody of Roberts, Salem man who was arrested at his request earlier this week.

Roberts found he was to travel with Mr. and Mrs. Skinner and their daughter in the family automobile. The Columbia river highway was their first goal. Before leaving, Skinner inquired here regarding road conditions and scenic spots to visit on the way home.

The embezzlement charge, Roberts declared to sheriff's men here, resulted from failure of his employer to keep sufficient funds in the bank to cover checks he issued as a battle buyer. He waived extradition.

Chimpanzee Near Human in Conduct

Topsy, Here With Russell Circus August 3 Has Numerous Tricks

The thin line of distinction that rests between the anthropoid apes of the animal kingdom and the human race is demonstrated by Topsy, the beloved chimpanzee mascot of Russell Bros. circus, to be seen at Salem on Tuesday, August 3.

The circus people see much in Topsy's conduct that is akin to human. She wears clothes and eats her meals in the dining tent with the rest of the circus "family." She delights in bathing her hands in a basin of water, is adept in the use of a washboard, and is fascinated by soapuds. She does all the cute little tricks of a child; will kiss the wound of a human friend to "make it well"; is quick in her defense of those she loves. Her face is highly mobile, and her enormously expansive lips and keen brown eyes are capable of expressing in turn the emotions of contentment, doubt, fear and terror; affection, disapproval, jealousy, anger, rage; hunger and satiety; loneliness and illness.

When Topsy had a severe stage of flu last winter she took her medicine "like a good girl" and submitted to an x-ray examination of her lungs without protest. And persons opposing the theory that animals have the power of reason will find refutation in the clever devices she uses in an effort to unlock her cage or maneuver herself out of a tight position.

Peerless Bakery Damaged by Fire

Equipment Loss Is Heavy; Early Morn Broadcast Aids in Discovery

An over-heated oven was the apparent cause of a fire which early Friday morning destroyed the bake room of the Peerless bakery, 170 North Commercial, and caused damage close to $5,000.

The blaze was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Chan Lam, proprietors of the Chinese Tea Garden, located above the bakery at 162 1/2 North Commercial. Awake to listen to a radio broadcast from China, the two Chinese discovered smoke coming from a skylight in an adjoining building and put in an alarm.

The bake room of the bakery was of mill work construction and was entirely ablaze when firemen arrived upon the scene. Damage was limited to the bake room with the storeroom of the establishment undamaged.

Damage mounted due to destruction of ovens and other shop equipment by the flames. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Theodore Coenenberg, owner of the bakery, recently had it remodeled extensively.

Vegetables Taken From Martin Car By Bug Inspector

When Governor Martin crossed the state line into California at the head of the Oregon caravan to the Golden Gate bridge opening fiesta, the "bug inspectors" discovered a quantity of potatoes and other vegetables concealed in the back of his car and confiscated them, it was revealed by Horace E. Walter, who drove the Salem Realty board car in the caravan. But the governor didn't know he had the vegetables and it was all a hoax engineered by others in the caravan.

Addressing the reality board at Friday's luncheon, Walter told of this and other amusing and interesting events of the California trip, including the manner in which the caravan's "triumphal" entry into San Francisco was turned into a nightmare of confusion due to many of the cars losing their way in San Rafael and missing the ferry.

Impressive sights at the fiesta were the arrival of 500 army and navy planes at Crissy field, all flying in formation as they approached, and the arrival of the fleet of 64 naval vessels, forming a geometrically straight line as viewed from the newly opened bridge.

Mr. Walter took occasion to thank the reality board and other Salem citizens who sponsored the board's car, the only one in the caravan officially representing Salem.

Irvine Resigns as Journal's Editor

Position; Wants Time for Civic Affairs

PORTLAND, July 23—(AP)—B. F. Irvine, who was 75 years of age yesterday, observed the event by retiring as editor of the Oregon Journal. His decision was announced in a letter today addressed to P. L. Jackson, whom he suggested should succeed him. A prominent figure in western journalism, Irvine has been editor of the Journal 30 years. He had been associated with the paper almost from the time C. S. Jackson moved from Pendleton to Portland to take over its direction.

Irvine came to Portland from an editorship at Corvallis to take command of the editorial page of the Journal. His career was made the more remarkable by his loss of eyesight many years ago.

In retiring from his post, Irvine wrote to P. L. Jackson, who succeeded his father as publisher, that "I do so in order to have time to take a more personal part in meeting the increasing demand for the paper to participate in movements, meetings and campaigns in nearby and more distant communities for local advancement."

The editor said he sought "surcease from the exacting and time-consuming duties of the editorship that I may more closely fit into the plans, program and service of the paper and have larger opportunity for inspiration and information absorbed from contact with the Journal's many friends throughout the Oregon country."

Jackson, in acknowledging Irvine's wish, expressed appreciation for the suggestion he should succeed Irvine and that he considered it his duty to "carry on the policies of my father which you, yourself, have carried on so faithfully for so many years."

Irvine recently refused reappointment to the state board of higher education after his term had expired.

Escheat Salvage Partial Success

The campaign of State Treasurer Rufus C. Holman to reduce materially the costs of administrators in escheat estate cases has been partially successful, he declared Friday.

Holman said that in the past a large number of estates escheating to the state virtually had been wiped out by lawyers, undertakers and administrator's expenses.

One of the most unusual cases occurred this week, Holman declared, when the state received $3,890 out of a $3,900 estate left by a man who died in a state institution. Holman acted as administrator while Attorney General Van Winkle looked after the legal end. Both served without compensation.

The only expenses listed was $5 for publishing the statutory notice to creditors and $8 for publishing a notice of hearing in closing the estate.

Of the total amount left by the men $550 went to the general fund for the patient's care in the institution and the remainder to the irreducible school fund.

Extra Passenger Trains Numerous

Many extra passenger trains have been running through Salem this week. Friday morning four extras went south, and northbound trains ran in multiple sections. Southbound were two trains of American Express tours, one train returning delegates to a convention of a negro fraternal order, and one overflow section for train 19.

The tours are reminiscent of old days when trainloads of summer tourists were a regular event. This year the parties have been routed to Mt. Rainier and Crater Lake. Alaska has also gotten considerable tourist business from the rail movement to Seattle.
