One Man Killed Earlier in Day When Struck by Auto in Crowd

CLEVELAND, O., July 27-(AP) At least 40 persons were injured and fifteen others arrested in wild fighting at the Corrigan-McKinney plant of the Republic Steel corporation that started just after dark last night and still was raging at 1 a.m., today.

Headquarters of the steel workers organizing committee nearby was wrecked in the battle that was a continuation of sporadic fighting that had gone on all day yesterday when one striker was run down and killed by an antomobile and at least two score were injured at that time.

Fought in the valley in which the hus steel plant is located police experienced difficulty in coping with the disorders.

From the hillside about the ant, rocks were hurled down on automobiles of workers, damaging. Safety Director Eliot Ness said, at least 100 cars.

All available police were massed in the area and brought tear gas guns into play when the disturbances started to spread.

Republic steel workers wearing white arm bands as identifying marks and carrying clubs, pick handles and similar weapons police said, swooped down upon the pickets from time to time.

The climax in the battle came about 11 p.m., when, police said. about 500 men rushed out of the plant and set upon pickets.

The strikers fled before the workers. Occasionally one would attempt to seize one of the weapons from the men with the white bands and a fight would ensue. From that point on into the early hours of the morning police details raced from one section of the plant to another breaking up sporadic fighting between workers and strikers. Asst. Safety Director Robert W. Chamberlin said he would ask Republic officials to abandon the three shifts that have been working since shortly after the plant resumed operations July 6 and return to two daily shifts so that there would be no change of workers during the night hours.

Mayor Harold H. Burton said he did not believe it necessary to ask return of the national guard troops which were withdrawn last The pickets were trying to keep workers from entering the Republic plant, which reopened under national guard surveillance July 6 after more than a month of inactivity brought by the CIOcalled strike to obtain signed bargaining agreements with Repub-

It was the second loss of the season for Wait's whose only other loss was to the Man's Shop. It was a game the Papermakers deserved to win for, trailing 4 to 1 as the game went into the ninth, they scored three runs when a pair of pinch-hitters, Henry Singer and Stub D'Arcy, behaved in most unorthodox manner and came through with blows. Johnny Dunn's double and Townsend's fifth hit of the game did the rest of the damage as the contest went into extra innings.

Crowfoot, the Papermaker windmill pitcher, had limited Wait's to six hits during the first nine innings and Singer, starting cold, held them to two more in the last three.

The Papermakers, led by Town and's five for five slugging, touched Sammy Steinbock for 15 blows but even despite the seven errors chalked against Wait's, they managed to keep the lead until the ninth.

At Longview, Abe Muir, international vice president of the brotherhood, threw the first verbal bomb at the woodworkers' CIO union, organized less than a week. The carpenters, Muir said, "will never work a stick of
