Among the passengers aboard the Maid are Rio Carewe, Among the passengers wealthy divorcee: Derek Haskell, Larry's college-bred, half-breed guide, of whom Rio is enamoured; Dr. Pool Van Cleve, a surgeon suffering from a nervous breakdown and very bitter towards all women; and Harp MacFarlane. Larry's veteran foreman. Just across the Canadian border, the boat anchors for the night and everyone goes ashore to dance in the grove. Alone with Bourne on bank, the romantic surroundings cast a spell over Denny and kisses him, completely forgetting her fiance, Murray Hart. When Bourne responds she becomes frightened and pulls away. Revelry apologizes but warns: "In this country no girl dares do what you did tonight - unless" . . . Humiliated, Denny flees to her stateroom, vowing to avoid him, but the next day he appears to have entirely forgotten the incident. She decides when they reach Tarnigan. One method would be to sell River House to Jack Page, captain of the Taku Wind, and Bourne's rival. Page has decided to disregard a gentlemen's agreement between his late father and Bourne's that the Pages would stay away from the Stikine as there was business enough for only one outfit. Denny Is sorry she will not be on hand to witness the contest for control of the Stikine, but she is thrilled to know that she holds the winning ace in the game they are to play. The Maid finally arrives at Tarnigan. The beauty of River House and its surroundings take Denny's breath away. But when Harp calls to "Honey-jo," Larry's buxom housekeeper, "See-this is what we brought-Larry's own little kid come home to River House," Denny wanted to cry "No! This is home!" The idea made her
