Circus Draws big Crowds in Salem

Palm Leaf Fans Much in Demand but Troupers Don't Mind Heat

Patrons of the Russell Bros. circus were greeted yesterday with typical midsummer circus day weather which resulted in the sale of innumerable palm leaf fans at the afternoon performance and which was felt only slightly less during the night show. But the veteran troupers, including even "Buddy," the sea-lion, who applauded himself enthusiastically after the successful completion of each trick, refused absolutely to allow the heat to affect the quality of the show. The tent might have been air conditioned judging from the actions of the performers.

Capt. Walter Jennier and his flinny charge, "Buddy," combine ring personalities for the show's foremost human interest attraction. "Buddy" did everything from arguing with his master to kissing him, including the playing of "America" on a set of musical horns at Jennier's commands. This last feat was only accomplished after Capt. Jennier had installed a pair of spectacles on "Buddy's" nose, thus enabling him to read the music.

Bob Fisher and his five fearless flyers, presented in the grand finale, produced probably the most spectacular event of the program. Fisher's double backward somersault from a bar to the catcher's hands, while blindfolded, was the high point.

The Rebras, brother and sister from France who do not yet speak English, furnished the spectators a thrill when Mademoiselle Rebra did a loop-the-loop on a bicycle running on a cylindrical track 15 feet above the arena, and mounted on a high pole balanced by her brother.

Miss Aerialta, off stage partner of Capt. Jennier, provided her share of thrills in her center ring act when she did what circus people refer to as a "standing ankle drop and somersault in mid-air" without safety devices. She broke her fall by catching hold of a dangling rope.

Creek Is Highway If It's Navigable

If the new channel of Seven Mile creek in Klamath county is navigable, it is a public highway for such purposes, Attorney General VanWinkle ruled Tuesday. The opinion further held, however, that the public has no right to land on the banks or bed of the stream since they belong to the abutting land owner. The opinion was requested by the state game commission.

Helser Firm's Claim Revised

Declaratory Judgment Is Asked Upon Nature of Company Business

The J. Henry Helsler & Co. suit against Corporation Commissioner J. H. Hazlett took a new tack yesterday when an amended complaint was filed in circuit court with Judge L. G. Levelling's permission. The company, located in Portland, is seeking a declaratory judgment ruling as to whether or not the nature of its business is such that it is required to secure a broker's permit from the state corporation department. The amended complaint states that the plaintiff filed supplementary articles of incorporation on Monday. The supplementary articles, among other points, include authorization for the firm to act as securities broker. Lack of such authorization in the original articles was alleged in a recent filing by the defense.

Hearing on the Helsler case was set for August 31. Harold Keppinger, trucker, filed suit in circuit court yesterday for $6500 damages from Sam Shleifer on the grounds that the defendant's truck driver was to blame for a collision with plaintiff's truck near Leweway service station on the Pacific highway six miles north of Jefferson last June 30. Keppinger claims he suffered gashes on the forehead, a broken tooth, injuries to an elbow and leg and to his nervous system. Of the $6500 demand, $900 is for lost wages.

Trials of the suit of John Lester McFarlane and others to upset a deed held by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ellingsworth to property which formerly belonged to the late Lola C. Overy will be resumed before Judge Levelling here this morning.

Lusk Is Sworn in As State Justice

Oath Is Administered by Bean at Ceremony in Court Building

Hall S. Lusk of Portland was sworn in Tuesday as a member of the state supreme court. He had resigned Monday as Multnomah county circuit judge, following his recent appointment to the supreme bench.

Justice Lusk succeeds the late Justice James U. Campbell, who died here recently. The oath was administered by Chief Justice Henry J. Bean, and was witnessed by a number of friends and relatives of the new justice. Included in the gathering were Mrs. Lusk and two daughters.

Brief congratulatory addresses were given by Governor Charles H. Martin, Ralph E. Moody, assistant attorney general; John F. Reilly and George B. Guthrie, Portland attorneys.

Is Congratulated—Justice Lusk responded briefly and thanked Governor Martin for his appointment.

At the conclusion of the brief ceremony Justice Lusk received congratulations from many of those assembled in the supreme court chamber.

Justice Lusk will occupy the office formerly used by Justice J. O. Bailey.

Under the commission issued by Governor Martin the new justices will serve until January 1, 1939.
