

Heavy Buying Raises Market

STEELS LEAD IN RECOVERY AS ALL ISSUES ENJOY SMALL GAINS. NEW YORK, Aug. 13 (AP)—Buying in volume returned to the stock market today, with steels hitting a fast recovery pace and many issues climbing fractions to 3 or more points to new tops for the move.

Demand for aircrafts and specialties kept the list on an even keel during early profit selling flurries. Steels, a bit hesitant at the start, swung upward in the afternoon. Selected farm implements, rails, rubbers, mail orders and chemicals were quick to follow. Utilities, oils and coppers failed to do much either way. While dealings picked up appreciably on extension of the rally, many traders were said to have retained their seats on the sidelines because of confusing Washington developments and renewed nervousness occasioned by the Sino-Japanese flareup at Shanghai, which could conceivably involve other nations.

Transfers totaled 1,035,030 shares compared with 793,200 yesterday. It was the largest aggregate since July 20. The Associated Press average was up .5 of a point at 70.3. Steels responded to indications operations will hold around present satisfactory levels or even go higher over the next several months. Reports agricultural machinery makers were working at capacity in their efforts to fill expanding orders gave a lift to these stocks.

"The Captive Bride" By Barrett Willoughby

CHAPTER XXVIII
In the faint light from storm-lashed windows, Denny paced the floor of her room in the Hotel Wrangel.
Since her arrival early in the morning, she had been alone, with nothing to do but think.
The Maid, as Bourne had predicted, had docked at daybreak. Van Cleve was immediately whisked away in the one waiting taxi to the hospital on the hill. Bourne had taken her in another car to the hotel near the dock.
In the deserted lobby the proprietor received them with a hearty "Congratulations, Captain! Glad to have you with us, Mrs. Bourne!"
Mrs. Bourne! The shock of hearing herself so addressed brought Denny out of the haze of unreality that had enveloped her since her hasty wedding in the pilot house. Was it necessary that she act the role of happy bride? she asked herself in a small panic, as she and Bourne mounted the stairs in the wake of the attentive proprietor.
She could not remember how she had responded to Revery's solicitous arrangements for her comfort when they reached her room. She recalled only her keen relief when he left her and the alacrity with which she had handed the proprietor the cable to Sylvia, which she had written out before leaving the Maid. That message was so gay, so spiced with exuberant adjectives and superlatives of happiness, that she marvelled at her own ability to so dissemble in her hour of despair.
That Sylvia had swirled immediately into activity to spread the news of the marriage by telephone and through the newspapers was evidenced by her answering cable, which arrived at lunch time. It was a lengthy communication containing her astonished delight, her benediction, her best wishes, and an outline of the social affairs she was planning to welcome her daughter and her new son-in-law.
Reading it, Denny knew that she should be satisfied; but for some reason she was not. Now that the measure of composure had come to her, she was appalled at the thing she had done to Revery Bourne. To save her injured pride, to save her face before her circle of friends in San Francisco, she had taken advantage of his exaltation in a high moment and tricked him into a wedding which she never intended should be a real marriage.
True, she had made an attempt to acquaint him with her purpose before it was too late; but when he refused to listen, she had been glad of the opportunity to hide her humiliating reasons for wanting to marry him, and now all her honest honesty rose up to castigate her.
She felt that she had acted like a cheat and a weakling.
If she would retain her self-respect, she must tell Bourne the facts immediately, without seeking to excuse or defend herself. He might forgive her; he might even be generous enough, chivalrous enough, to accompany her south and act his part for the sake of her father, who had been his friend.
She had begun to wait impatiently for his return to the room, so that she might get the ordeal over. But hour after hour had gone by, bringing no word from him and no sight of him. Already daylight was fading, and her nerves seemed at the breaking point from uncertainty and the continuous lashing of the storm.
"How does he dare leave me alone so long in this horrible place?" she thought, resuming her pacing. "Where is he? Why doesn't he come?" Resentment took root in her mind.
She began to remember all the things she had against him—his remark about leading him; his

Raises Wheat

First Results of Harvest Acts to Put Prices on up Trend

CHICAGO, Aug. 13 (AP)—Worse threshing returns in Canada than were expected did much today to run up Chicago wheat prices an extreme of 2 1/2 cents a bushel.

Lively profit-taking sales at the last, however, virtually wiped out wheat market gains here. On the other hand, aggressive demand from export and milling interests was a feature of wheat trade at Winnipeg, where quotations bounded up 3 1/2 cents over the previous close.

Authoritative summaries said many wheat fields in Saskatchewan province, Canada, which it was believed would return seed or a little better, will have to be abandoned. In eastern Alberta, widespread regions are proving to be complete failures and in Manitoba durum as well as bread wheat threshing promises, also, to be very disappointing both as to grade and yield.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were exactly unchanged to 1/4 of a cent higher compared with yesterday's finish. Sept. $1.12 1/4; Dec. $1.13 1/4; May $1.15-1.15 1/4.

Trading on Wool Mart Scattered

BOSTON, August 13 (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow: "Scattered trading on a very limited scale has marked the week in the eastern seaboard wool markets. Wool seems to have been relatively more active."

"In the west, a similar situation exists, scattered buying in small way being reported more or less in various sections but the total turnover has been small. Prices are steady at last week's level, as a rule.

The piecegoods markets are disappointing. There is nothing yet to give the mills an indication of the buying strength or trend.

"Foreign markets are not very active but are very strong and a shade against the buyer. The opening in Australia, August 30, is expected to be strong.

"Mohair is rather dull but very strong." The Bulletin will publish the following quotations: scoured basis: Oregon: fine and F. M. staple 97-98; fine and F. M. clothing 90-92. Mohair: Oregon, 65-67.
