Super-Trucks Bring "Parade of Progress" Show

The young women adorning the streamlined highway Lincoln of the General Motors Parade of Progress are not with the show. They are merely pictured to give you an idea of the magnitude of the super-trucks. These trucks convert to a series of exhibit halls on location. The show opens Sunday at 7 p.m. and remains through Monday with continuous performances from 2 to 10 p.m. It is free.

Unique Power Plant Serves "Parade of Progress" Exhibition Due Here Sunday; Variety of Currents Used

Two complete mobile power and lighting plants sufficient for all its exhibition needs are two of the many evidences of super-organization shown by the General Motors Parade of Progress opening in Salem Sunday night at 7 o'clock to give the local residents a view of the wonders of science at the circus grounds at Mission and 14th street.

Own Electricity
 One unit, a 35 KW Winton diesel power plant is transported in a 28-foot tractor and trailer unit. Another 35 KW gasoline driven power plant has been added in order to operate the additional equipment that has been added to the show since its initial showing in Miami in January, 1936.

Variety of Voltage
 Furnishing both power for the mechanical exhibit marvels and lighting for the huge "big top" tent and the streamlined exhibit halls, these mobile power plants boast of a greater variety of voltages and currents than the ordinary type of power plant.

Friction Increased
 Here's how science accomplishes such marvels. The 3600 cycle current generated by the Winton Diesel changes the direction of the current flow in the induction furnace coil wires 3600 times a second, setting up a terrific magnetic friction or heat on all magnetic subjects in the field.

Letter on Hop Outlook Sent

Growers Receive Ballots to Vote Preference of two Plans

In mail boxes all over the hop producing areas of Oregon yesterday hop growers found letters from the hop reduction committee, containing a referendum on the two schemes for relief from overproduction that are to be voted upon.

The letters contained ballots whereby the schemes may be voted upon by the individual grower as to which method of meeting the hop crisis, caused by the brewers' killing of the McNary bill in congress, he may prefer.

The first ballot title reads: "I favor immediate organization of a cooperative association for the hop industry."

If this plan is voted, hops will be impounded after picking and baling to control market prices. The other ballot title reads: "The undersigned grower of hops in the state of Oregon, in consideration of the promises and agreements of other hop growers in said state whose names are subscribed to this or duplicates hereof, does hereby agree to reduce the production of his 1937 crop of hops to the amount of 20 per cent. in quantity."

This agreement shall be effective as, and shall have the force and effect of, a contract when the similar agreements are signed by producers of 75 per cent. in amount, of the Oregon 1937 hop production.

Each grower also found in his letter the following communication from W. H. Anderson of Eugene, heading the special hop reduction program committee for the Oregon Growers association, in the form of an explanation: "You are well aware of the emergency facing the hop industry at the present time."

"You also know that several unsuccessful attempts have been made to organize the growers so that they might improve their condition."

"Just recently the committee of Pacific coast growers has gone to Washington, D. C. and with the cooperation of members of congress from the Pacific coast, has caused to be introduced in congress, legislation which would have placed hops under a definite marketing act, and which would have been very beneficial to the hop growers. This bill passed the house of representatives, but due to the opposition of the brewers, unanimous consent could not be obtained for the consideration of the bill in the senate so that action on this bill will be postponed until the next session of congress."

"This bill, if enacted into law, which can be done if the growers organize properly, will make it possible to so regulate the hop industry of the future that the growers will be assured of a fair return over the cost of production."

"On August 13, at a meeting called by this association, a resolution was passed creating a committee instructed to carry out two projects, which are:

"(1) Many growers seem to feel that it is desirable and practical to curtail the present crop. Consequently the committee has caused to be drafted and enclosed a contract which must be signed and returned in the enclosed envelope, on or before August 23, 1937, if you approve of this plan. The committee will immediately canvass the agreements returned and you will be notified whether you are bound to curtail your production for the year 1937 in accordance with the terms of the contract, or whether this project is abandoned due to the failure to receive sufficient signatures."

"(2) The officials at Washington have repeatedly made it clear that the growers of hops cannot expect the continued assistance of the government unless the growers indicate their ability and desire to help themselves by setting up an effective organization. It has also been increasing apparent to everyone who has studied the situation, that the growers as individuals, are now helpless and that a strong organization is the only way out—consequently in accordance with the instructions given this committee by the meeting on August 13, we are asking you to express your opinion as to the desirability of organizing a cooperative marketing association. If you believe that such a permanent organization should be formed, you will please sign this document also and return in the enclosed envelope."

"There are no funds available at the present time for carrying on this program. For the past several years, various individual growers have contributed large amounts of time and money for the benefit of the hop growers. This is unfair. If you are in favor of this work, will you please return in the enclosed envelope any sum you may be able to contribute—from $1 to $25, depending on the size of your yard."

"Your committee expects the prompt and hearty cooperation of each and every hop grower in the state of Oregon, Washington and California, and requests your prompt response, particularly, to the organization proposal."
