Idaho Farm Land Sinks Forming 200 Foot Canyon

Earth tremors, rumblings and eruptive clouds of yellow, volcanic dust, accompanied the sinking of a five acre tract near Buhl, Idaho. In less than two weeks the tract sank 200 feet and gaping cracks appeared throughout an adjoining 17-acre tract. The land where the phenomenon is taking place is on the H. A. Robertson farm, which is pictured here showing how the earth cracked and caved in. Notice how top soil on sunken portions of earth remains intact.—IIN photo.

Old Depot Hotel at Gervais Falls Victim to Progress, Being Razed

GERVAIS—Claire Byrne has bought the old building known as the Depot hotel and is tearing it down to be rebuilt on his land in the Lake Labish district.

Mr. Byrne traded property in Charles Mix county, S. D., for 25 acres here last year and is improving it. He bought 900 trees in the timber. He owns his saw mill and is cutting the logs for a service station and camp ground.

The main building is 60 by 80 feet and will contain a lobby across the entire front. Immediately back of the lobby will be a dance hall and skating rink through the center with dining rooms on each side. At the back of these will be the kitchen and a cooler. On the grounds will be 20 log cabins. The lumber salvaged from the hotel building will be used for interior finish.

Mrs. Mary Nibler and son, August, built the rear or what was called the old part of the hotel, 56 years ago and about ten years later added the front part, John Welsz doing the carpenter work. A Mr. Rector was the first to operate the hotel. The Niblers were in charge for 15 or 20 years and they sold it to George Minkel, who later sold to a Mr. Catlin. It has changed hands several times in later years. Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Ellsworth being the last to operate it.

During the years the Niblers were in charge Gervais was a bustling little town. The amusement on Sundays was baseball and horse racing and we are told that they always prepared Sunday dinner for 150. Their rooms, 19 in number, were always full and they often sent private parties to private homes for a night. Automobiles and good roads have made the small town hotel an uphill business.

Loganberry Pool Meets at Liberty

LIBERTY—The Salem Loganberry Growers' association held a meeting at the hall here Monday. Reports were made on this year's business in disposing of the association's large loganberry pool. The Jory Packing company of this district canned the fruit for the organization. Checks were issued to the growers for their crop.

Members of the organization also discussed the prune outlook for this fall. The association will have a prune pool which will consist of 200 acres. Tonnage is as yet uncertain as growers reported a heavy fall of prunes at this time. In many orchards, it was said, as much as two-thirds of the prunes have already dropped during the present dry hot spell of weather.

The association has as yet not disposed of the prune pool and may put it in a cooperative.
