Dropping of Buses Cuts High School

SCIO—Enrollment in Scio high school classes was 65 when classes were taken up Tuesday of this week, according to J. H. Tumbleton, principal. The 1937-38 school year opened Monday, September 13.

The senior class at the high school opening Monday numbered 17, according to the principal; juniors rolled up a total of 16; sophomores were at the foot of the list with 14; freshmen topped the count with 18. As usual, enrollment is expected to increase to some extent, as many students still are employed in hop and fruit fields.

Due to discontinuance of buses this year, attendance in both departments was expected to be curtailed.

A three-teacher set-up had been tentatively planned for the high school, establishing a curriculum that was disappointing to some, although still complying with requirements for a standard high school course, Tumbleton pointed out.

However, as membership mounted it was deemed advisable to add a fourth instructor, and the school board is now seeking to supply this vacancy.

High school instructors at present are J. H. Tumbleton, principal for the third consecutive year; Miss Doris Clausen, and Ira Winters. The last-named was added to the corps a short time ago upon the resignation of W. S. Snyder, who accepted a late appointment in Brownsville high school.
