League of Nations advisory committee convening tomorrow night to consider the Sino-Japanese conflict.

At the same time, the United States informed the league it could not say to what extent it would be able to cooperate with the committee until informed about the conditions it will be expected to perform.

A state department announcement said these facts were communicated to the secretary general of the league by Leland Harrison, American minister to Switzerland. Harrison was designated to attend the forthcoming meeting of the committee as this government's representative.

It was specified that the American minister would attend the session "in the same capacity and for the same purposes" as those fulfilled by Hugh Wilson, former minister to Switzerland, when he represented the United States on the committee in 1932.

At that time the advisory body was created to consider the Manchurian crisis. The United States agreed to be represented on it, at the invitation of the league, only in a consultative capacity. Wilson attended its sessions on that basis, which did not give him the right to vote in the committee's deliberations.

The United States communication to the league emphasized that this country believes "thoroughly in the principle of collaboration among states of the world seeking to bring about peaceful solutions of international conflicts."

Earlier today, American officials took pains to make clear that the departure of the U. S. ambassador from Nanking was no slight to China.

Dispatches from Nanking had said that the ambassador's action had aroused resentment among Chinese, who believed it indicated a lack of respect for the Chinese cause.

Officials at the state department emphasized that the move did not constitute abandonment, even temporarily, of American representation in the area. They said Ambassador Johnson expected to carry on his duties aboard the patrol boat Luzon.

you," as one of the brothers threatened him. "You are the one who defended the one who killed my sister," Myers declared one of them shouted. Myers said Denhardt was not armed.

Patrolmen Tracey and Claude Hammon came running up and the three brothers quietly surrendered and were taken to jail as a huge crowd gathered, Myers said.

"Murder by a bullet wound through the head and another through the heart" was the verdict returned by Coroner D. F. L. Lapsley. The undertaker said, however, Denhardt had been wounded seven times.

Tracey said that Roy Garr told him "I did it" as he surrendered. Denhardt, who was divorced in 1932 after 32 years of wedlock, told the jury that tried him last April that Mrs. Taylor killed herself with his army pistol.

He declared she had become morose after threats against her by a jealous suitor. The commonwealth claimed he killed her because she refused to marry him. The state demanded the death penalty.

The couple became acquainted early in 1936 after Denhardt retired as state adjutant general and bought a farm near where Mrs. Taylor lived. The courtship followed and she married Ford Knox where Denhardt as adjutant general and national guard brigadier general commanded Kentucky troops in the annual summer maneuvers.

Denhardt's suit declared his enemies were trying to imprison and destroy him "financially, politically and socially."

Denhardt, a veteran of three wars, lawyer and newspaper publisher, was a noted explorer in the 17-ton flying ship when the Wilkins radio faded out as he attempted to make a landing at a lake near the Mackenzie river delta.

But radio advices received advised here from Aklavik late today said:

"Wilkins was landing and his signals cut. He didn't go on the air again from until late afternoon yesterday until noon today."

Cascade Range Is Sheathed in Snow

BEND, Sept. 20.—(P)—A weekend snow flurry left the central Oregon Cascades dressed in a glistening mantle of white today.

Motorists reported they encountered a blizzard near the north rim of Crater lake Sunday. The snow reached a six-inch depth in some sections. A light blanket fell over the McKenzie pass lava fields. The storm was more severe on the peaks above the timberline.

More than an inch of rain in some parts of the Deschutes forest drenched the region for hundreds of hunters reaching the mule deer country for opening day.

"Pirate" Sub on Ocean Floor?

Possible solution to the identity of "pirate" submarines which have been molesting Mediterranean shipping was seen in the report that one of the mysterious crafts was lying on the ocean floor off Cartagena, Spanish southern naval base. It was believed that the submarine was damaged by depth bombs dropped by government warships and was unable to rise to the surface. Identification of the craft would tend to confirm or refute Russian charges that the "pirate" submarines were Italian.

General Plans of Library Approved

Architects were here Monday checking over the office space in the new building with state officials. They said approximately two months would be required to prepare the detailed plans.

The board of control cannot issue certificates of indebtedness for the proposed purchase or construction of a $700,000 state office building in Portland unless the certificates are paid off by rental receipts from state offices.

Van Winkle pointed out that the constitution provides that the legislature shall not create any debt to exceed $50,000 except in emergency and highway legislation.

The rentals should decline in the future, the holders of the certificates would not be protected. He also ruled that the board of control would not be authorized to enter into an agreement whereby certain sums were guaranteed as payment on the building.

The legislature always has authority to provide that funds other than rentals may be used to pay off the certificates, but it has not yet done so.

Van Winkle said that the board has authority to fix the interest rate on the certificates, but "it would appear that the legislature contemplated that the rate of interest would be not to exceed three per cent annually in any instance."

Governor Offers Turk Show Prize

Among the principal trophies of the northwestern turkey show at Oakland, Oregon, December 7 to 11 will be a special trophy offered by Governor Charles H. Martin, for the master breeder of the show. This will be known as the governor's trophy, and will be much sought after by the leading breeders.

Besides this there will be special trophies for champions of each breed, according to J. C. Leedy of Brooks, who is publicity manager for the show management. There are also between seven and eight hundred other awards in both the live and dressed shows. Premium money is widely distributed, and this policy has created such wide interest that for five years this exhibition has been the largest turkey show in the world with exhibitors coming from many states.

with domestic problems was thought to preclude any European entanglements.

The British sources said the evidence of the moral support of America as outlined in Hull's international broadcast with Eden yesterday strengthened Britain's position in Europe.

The outstanding British foreign problem was the Mediterranean anti-piracy control, in which Italy so far has refused to participate without recognition of her "absolute parity."

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—(P)—British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, tempering his severity with a note of conciliation, warned the fascist powers tonight that Britain is committed irrevocably to a policy of rearmament unless other nations cease competing for supremacy at arms.

Speaking before a hushed League of Nations assembly which had voted government Spain out of its council for the next three years, at least, Eden struck a note of mingled hope and pessimism. Despite the dark picture he painted and his implied rebukes at Germany and Italy, he emphasized Britain's determination still to strive for peace.

Significantly, his listeners believed the British foreign secretary emphasized British hopes for peace when he touched on Spain.

"One pledge I can give unequivocally to this assembly," he said, "is that the government I represent will spare no endeavor to prevent war from engulfing Europe."

Burning Cave new Novelty at Buhl; Sink Still Active

BUHL, Idaho, Sept. 20.—(P)—Out of this land of geological quirks today came a new rival to Buhl's "sinking canyon" fame.

Ed Ulrich, Clover district farmer, and his four sons discovered a "burning cave" in the Little Salmon river canyon, six miles below Salmon dam.

They reported the cave was 100 feet wide and extended 15 feet back into the lava walls of the canyon. Heat and smoke covered the cave's entrance with soot. The interior is fissured with cracks.

"When the cave stopped smoking momentarily," Ulrich said, "we threw rocks down the cracks and smoke poured out again."

The "sinking land" phenomenon, which moved a quarter of a mile from the original disturbance last week, is continuing actively eight miles northwest of Buhl. Giant rock and earth "shavings," jarred loose by subterranean rumblings, are cascading into the river.
