League of Cities May Revise Fees

A possible new schedule of fees to be paid by Oregon cities for membership in the League of Oregon Cities, various matters of municipal policy, and legislation to be asked of the 1939 state legislature will be discussed at a meeting of the executive committee of the league in Portland Sunday.

Mayor V. E. Kuhn, as president of the league, is a member of the executive committee. Instead of the present schedule on round number population basis it is proposed that each city pay a fee of one cent per capita, with a minimum of $10, which would be increased. Seattle, for example, now pays a membership fee of $100 annually and $150 each two years for legislative assessment.

Under the proposed plan Salem would pay annually $22.66 on the basis of the 1930 census. Portland now pays a membership fee of $200 and a legislative assessment of $350. Under the per capita plan it would pay $3,018.15.

Building Barriers For Shelton Ditch

Gravel levee and piling barriers intended to keep Shelton ditch within its banks will be constructed within the next few weeks both above and below the South Church street bridge, City Engineer Hugh Rogers said yesterday. Surplus gravel will be stored in stock piles for street surfacing. The ditch channel was straightened through the old municipal auto camp grounds two years ago but subsequent high water created gravel bars which last winter caused renewed flooding of the park.

Rogers has two power shovels and crews at work on the ditch now.

Land Board Plans To Sue Stanfield

Alleged Word by Martin Is Given as Cause of Non-Payment

Announcement was made yesterday by the state land board that a suit will be started within the next few days to collect $1270 from Robert N. Stanfield, renter from October 1 on state school land. In event collecting of the money is effected through other sources, the plan to sue will be dropped.

"The land board leased these school lands to Stanfield and there is no reason why the rentals should not be collected," State Treasurer Rufus C. Holman said.

Stanfield Blames Martin
A letter from Stanfield's secretary declared that refusal to pay the last half rentals probably was due to an alleged statement made by Governor Charles H. Martin at Burns, in which he was reported to have referred to Stanfield as a chiseler.

Stanfield charged, according to his secretary's letter, that he was unable to sublease the lands because of this alleged statement by the governor and another remark that the land board would cancel the Stanfield leases.

"I never made any such statements at Burns or any other place," Governor Martin said.

"The president of the United States has by proclamation designated the week of October 3 to 9, inclusive, as fire prevention week.

"When life or property is destroyed by fire every citizen of our state suffers loss. While in some cases the individuals who are most immediately affected may be partially reimbursed through insurance, the fact remains that the state has lost a part of its resources, which affects all of us.

"I, as governor of the state of Oregon, appeal to the citizens of Oregon to observe this week, not only to prevent fires and to remove all fire hazards from home and business during this week, but to plan and start fire prevention programs of a permanent nature, making this week the beginning of fire prevention activities."

Old P.O. May See Christmas Season

Salem's old postoffice building may witness another Christmas mailing rush, according to developments yesterday. Since to be removed immediately after October 15 when the new building is to be occupied, the old structure may be retained at the site until after the holidays, if the Hoffman Construction company, contractors on the job, agree.

Postmaster Henry Crawford stated use of the old building would facilitate handling the record volume of mail expected this year at Christmas. Although he added, his force of workers could cope with the situation even if the building were taken away. The additional unit of the new postoffice will occupy the space now covered by the old building and cannot possibly be finished by the first of the year.

Sidewalks to the new structure are being placed this week.
