Style - Smiles - - - by Gretchen

"If John wins it again this year, he gets permanent possession of it, I'm afraid." If it's a trophy, it's strange how blind he'll continue to its lack of beauty though he really values such good line and perfect taste as his wife's black sheer wool on the right. A sunburst of darts trims its bodice and skirt pockets and there is distinctive emphasis on outline from neck to hem via a padded roll of black grosgrain. The hem of the black silk jersey on the left received special attention, too, with a border of crushed velvet ribbon of which the big lovers' knots also are made to furnish a touch of humor and a finish in back. - Copyright 1937, Esquire Features, Inc.
