German Situation Looks Much Worse at Distance, Schoeler Tells Audience at Silvertown

SILVERTON—That Germany and what that country does look much worse at a distance than at close hand, was the expressed opinion of Dr. William Schoeler of Corvallis in an address at Trinity church Tuesday night. And persecution is a matter of personal opinion, he added.

He was asked about the Jewish situation in Germany and replied that the Jews were permitted to live there and carry on their business without any trouble at all, but they could not become German citizens nor could they hold any offices.

The reason for this, as explained to him, he said, was that the Germans found that the Jews were becoming too much in power. The Germans felt that as it was a German country the Germans should rule. Much the same as the Oriental situation here, he added. This country does not, he explained, allow Orientals to become citizens.

Also the United States excludes other nationalities over certain numbers. Germany has gone one step further and taken away the citizenship from German-born Jews.

Removing Money Is Offense
Removing money from Germany, Dr. Schoeler admitted, was a criminal offense, the same as hoarding gold in this country, he explained.

The religious situation, Dr. Schoeler explained, is a little difficult. There, he said, people are born into the church and have to get out. Here people are born out of the church and have to get in. Unless members step out, they are taxed like they are for any other government obligation. Also the ministers have to preach what the government asks them to, which he added is not so unnatural, as the government hires them. If they don't like it they can step out.

Spoke Freely in Germany
There are many churches, he explained, which are not under the government and which carry on their services as they wish. He himself during last summer, when he spent several weeks studying the situation in Germany, spoke at over a score of meetings and not once, he said, was he told what he must or must not say.

The whole situation, as seen by Dr. Schoeler, is a reaction against too much communism immediately following the war. He saw no evidences of communism whatsoever last summer in Germany, he said.

Is Germany's Own Business
Perhaps, he added, folks here do not agree with Germany, but the way the German country is running its government is after all her own business, like government here in the business of the United States.

All governments have been going through difficult times following the World war, he explained, and each is endeavoring in its own way to work out a solution.

Dr. Schoeler also touched upon the Lutheran student service work which he is carrying on at the state university, college, and normal schools. The work originated 13 years ago at Trinity church at Silvertown.
