Plato on the Decay of Democracy

Moderns think they have political troubles. Really difficulties in human association are as old as humanity. Plato, the Greek philosopher, was as wise a man as the human race has produced. In his "Republic" he outlined his ideal state, the distinction of gracing the but he drew on the experience of history to protect it against the evils that had been revealed. His description of the decay of the democratic form of government has so modern a sound it is interesting to read what he has to say on the Aurora, Oregon. subject. Tyrants arise, he says, out of the ruins of democracy, so modern developments follow an ancient formula: Here is what Plato wrote on the subject. His material is set down in dialogue form with Socrates, the "I", as principal speaker, with Glaucon to interrupt him with comment or query:

"The excess of liberty, whether in states or in individuals, seems only to pass into excess of slavery."

"Yes, the natural order." "And so tyranny arises out of democracy, and the most aggravated form of tyranny and slavery out of the most extreme form of liberty?'

"As we might expect." . . . "Then, in order that we may see clearly what we are doing, let us imagine democracy to be divided, as indeed it is, into three classes: for in the first place freedom creates rather more drones in the democratic than there were in the oligarchial state.' "That is true.

"And in the democracy they are certainly more intensi-

"How so?" "Because in the oligarchical state they are disqualified and driven from office, and therefore they cannot train or gather strength; whereas in a democracy they are almost the entire ruling power. . . . .

'Very true, he said." Then there is another class which is always being severed from the mass.'

"What is that?" "They are the orderly class, which is a nation of traders is sure to be the richest."

"Naturally so." They are the most squeezable persons and yield the largest amount of honey to the drones."

'Why, he said, there is little to be squeezed out of people who have little.'

"And this is called the wealthy class, and the drones feed "That is pretty much the case, he said."

The people are a third class, consisting of those who work with their own hands; they are not politicians, and have not much to live upon. This, when assembled, is the largest and most powerful class in a democracy." True, he said; but then the multitude is seldom willing to congregate unless they get a little honey." "And do they not share? I said. Do not their leaders deprive the rich of their estates and distribute them among the people; at the same time taking care to reserve the larger part for

The people have always some champion whom they set over them and nurse into greatness." "Yes, that is their way."

"This and no other is the root from which a tyrant springs: when he first appeals above ground he is a protector."

"Yes, that is quite clear. . . ." "At first, in the early days of his power, he is full of smiles, and he salutes everyone whom he meets; -he to be called a tyrant, who is making promises in public and also in private! liberating debtors, and distributing land to the people and his followers, and wanted to be so kind and good to everyone." Later, according to Plato, the tyrant forces a foreign war to divert the people, and after that stages a "purgation" to rid himself of internal enemies.

Plato was writing of past experience, not attempting to formulate prophecy. Historical parallels are by no means identic; but in many respects Plato's dialogue gives an accurate picture of today's political pattern with its "share-thewealth," "soak-the-rich," its smiling "protector,' and in some countries the fully accountered "tyrant."

Government Reorganization

One of the proposals for executive reorganization is the creation of a department of conservation. To this department would be transferred bureaus like forestry, public lands, etc. Secretary Ickes, head of the interior department, upon a bluff overlooking the Wilis an ardent advocate of the change. Principal opponent is lamette. Gifford Pinchot, one-time chief forester, who objects to transfer of the forestry bureau from the department of agricul-

This reveals the long-standing feud between the forestry division and the department of the interior. The former administers the great forest reserves, the latter the public lands and national parks and monuments. Cattle and sheep graze on public lands over which the interior department has jurisdiction: also in forest reserves of which the forest service is boss. It seems quite a logical plan to consolidate this ad-

As far as conservation goes Secretary Ickes would be as loyal to Pinchot principles as Secretary Wallace is. Everything depends on the type of men selected to administer the departments. And that depends chiefly on the good purpose and judgment of the president.

We can never get anywhere in government reorganization with the subordinate bureaus trying to dictate just how 'aristocrats.' 'Hyas Tyee' (Chief settled. Here old squaw Molly they shall be handled. It is instinctive for each bureau to bristle in defense of its privileges and perquisites; and the chiefs all run to pet congressmen to blockade every reorganization plan proposed. The trouble with the president's plan is that in some respects it doesn't go far enough to shrink the federal establishment now so overgrown it spills over into Baltimore and Philadelphia.

It is time the grand jury or some other responsible agency put a stop to obscene exhibitions semi-public in nature. Starting just with the risque they progress by steady degrees to the depth of depravity. The worst, according to report, was not the weathered old buzzards who essayed the strip-tease, but motion pictures which left nothing to the imagination. The trouble with decent folk in many organizations is that they lack courage to protest. They do not want to appear prudish killjoys, so they let the rotten show go on. With grand jury and publicity for backing maybe they will raise timely objection performances morally degrading. And the jury ought to proceed against the vendors of such filth.

'Better Fruit" magazine has an article entitled "New frontiers for pears." For the benefit of Art Perry who stuck his neck out too far when he offered Medford pears to Salem editors if Bend high lost its Thanksgiving football game, we want to say that one new frontier for choice Rogue river pears is just posterior to our lower vest button. Like Sips, we prefer Comice.

Judge Cushman of Tacoma has cited Dave Beck to appear to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court. Judge Cushman is bold. Didn't Beck's attorney threaten him, indirectly, in open court by saying Judge Fee of Portland would face impeachment proceedings? and his offense was the same as Cushman's.

Senator Pope says the new AAA will be upheld as constitutional. The second Guffey act was upheld; the Wagner act with reiterated part of the language of the NRA was upheld; the second Frazier-Lamke act was upheld. The new rule seems to be, if a bill is passed twice it must be constitutional.

The president offers five points in his current effort to stop the sion. Conspicuous for its omission is some labor control to end jurisdictional fights, sitdowns, etc. This condition is quite as much sible for business revolt as anything

Occasionally we hear some one who is sore at the Oregonian's ditorials say, "If only old Harvey Scott were back. . . ." Heck, if Scott were back the editorial page is the only one he would recog-
