Postoffice Signs Additional Aides

Extra Force of 30 Ready to Help in Christmas Rush Due Soon

Additional helpers required for handling the Christmas rush at the Salem postoffice have all been lined up, cars have been assigned and everything is in readiness for opening the heavy holiday mail period. Postmaster H. R. Crawford states.

At least 30 extra persons will be employed by the postoffice here during this period, which usually runs for 10 days. This means that during the holiday mail peak, the local office will have a force of 100 persons. The helper list as completed shows assistants for 24 local carriers, in addition to other extra workers.

Foreign Mail Rush On

Considerable foreign-bound holiday mail has already been posted at the office here, the postmaster says, adding that persons who expect to have packages reach foreign lands by the Yule season should get them in the mail at once.

Early local mailing is expected to start within a short time, and as usual, the postal force is encouraging early mailing so the last minute rush may be averted as much as possible.
