'Economic Constitution' Is Title Appended to Sweeping Proposal

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON WASHINGTON, Dec. 2-(AP)-On the doorstep of a congress still revolving in dizzy circles of uncertainty, a proposal that it pack many of its economic, social and political troubles in a single kit bag has been left by Senators Borah, Idaho republican, and O'Mahoney, Wyoming democrat. If their joint bill requiring corporations to take out federa licenses would do what they clain for it, congress could adopt it and cut its pre-election agenda to the bone. It might make possible that early start on 1938 electioneering which many legislators desire. As spokesman for the team O'Mahoney told the senate the bill would provide an "economic constitution" for the nation. He said this was as badly needed as was the political constitution of 1787 It would, he said, stabilize and stimulate commerce, prevent anti trust law violations, de-concen trate economic wealth and power safeguard investors, improve wage and hour standards, abolish child labor, guarantee collective bargaining and end monopoly.

Commerce and Wage It sounds like a large order, but it's all in the Borah-O'Mahoney draft, from an all-embracing statutory definition of interstate commerce to a new minimum wagesetting formula.
