Natural Wood

Modern attractive schoolrooms with interesting interiors, convenient arrangement and air conditioning are a far cry from those only a generation back. Education now-a-days is not only a case of learning the multiplication tables but includes appreciation of beautiful surroundings.

Several schools constructed within the past two years in Oregon and Washington are entirely of wood and are decorated in the early American style. The one built recently in Dallas is pictured in "Big Trees" a paper devoted to the interests of northwest woods.

This school was designed by N. C. Freeman, and is constructed of local materials, combining walls of knotty west coast hemlock with sound absorbant, blending wood Meat Recipes Use Less composition ceilings.
