Hoogerhyde Trial To Start Monday

Oregon City Scene; Case Involves Hit and Run Charge, 2 Deaths

With the state's witnesses subpoenaed at 1:30 p.m., the trial of Clarence Hoogerhyde, 22, of Salem, on a hit-run driving charge, will open with selection of jurors at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the Clackamas county courthouse at Oregon City. District Attorney Lyle J. Page and Deputy Joseph B. Felton will present the state's case.
Edwin Keach, who with Paul Burris will defend Hoogerhyde under appointment by Circuit Judge L. H. McMahon, will not decide how many defense witnesses they will call until the state's case nears completion, he said late last week. The two attorneys will receive their actual, necessary expenses. Judge McMahon advised them when they were delegated to represent Hoogerhyde.
Whether or not Hoogerhyde will be held in Oregon City during the three days the trial is expected to last will be determined after he is taken there Monday morning. Sheriff A. C. Burk said yesterday. Judge Earl C. Latourette, who will preside over the trial, will direct what arrangements are to be followed.
The state's witnesses will be required to furnish their own transportation to Oregon City, according to the district attorney. They will be entitled to mileage fee, five cents per mile, for one trip each way, and the usual $3 a day pay. The prosecution expects to call 25 witnesses before the trial ends.
The charge against Hoogerhyde, under an indictment by the grand jury, is one under a statute which permits a hit-run driving offense resulting in a death to be set up as a felony. The indictment charges Hoogerhyde with failing to stop after his automobile struck and fatally injured Mrs. Fredericka Green on October 29. Mrs. Clara Swafford also died from injuries received in the same accident, at 17th and State streets.

Double Feature Deemed Menace

Movie theaters throughout United States are faced with a dilemma. Having accustomed patrons to a double feature policy, and often throwing in bank night for good measure, they find themselves confronted with a shortage of films. As a result, they are forced to substitute quantity for quality and Hollywood is hard-pressed to turn out its quota of 600 features a year and make them keep up to standard. Samuel Goldwyn is one of the major producers who has long criticized the situation and his protest is now supported by many moviegoers who are tired of sitting through mediocre bills which are endurance tests but hardly good entertainment. Consequently, many predict a return to the single feature program and more care and artistic effort on the part of Hollywood.

$88,000 Is Found in Wooden Leg as Investigator of Case Buys Member; Hidden Cash Climax to Mystery of Missing Man

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—The story of "Noah Goldberg's" wooden leg and how the Polish vice-consul in Vienna, desiring the leg for himself, accidentally discovered it held a treasury of $88,000, was disclosed in a report filed in surrogates court by Arthur L. Davis, an attorney.
Davis is counsel for Mrs. Rose Laikin, a dressmaker, and the report gave an account of her stewardship as general guardian for her two daughters, Adele, 18, and Marilyn, 13.
Nine years ago, Davis wrote, Mrs. Laikin's husband, Frank, separated from her. He disappeared. She made inquiries about him but they were fruitless. She remembered, though, he often had said he would go to Europe, and so in June, 1929, when she heard one "Noah Goldberg" had died in Vienna, she began an investigation.
She appealed to the Polish consul here. She told him she was convinced Goldberg was Laikin. The consul was plainly skeptical. Eventually he was convinced.
But Goldberg had left only a few hundred dollars, and that puzzled Mrs. Laikin, for her husband had been a prosperous man. The Polish consulate in Vienna took up the matter of Goldberg's identity, and since it was necessary to settle his affairs decided to sell his few assets.
Those included the wooden leg. The vice consul himself had a wooden leg, but Goldberg's looked better. The vice consul thought he would like to buy it.
In trying to fit it on, he touched a hidden spring. Out came $88,000 bills. Some time later Goldberg was positively identified as Laikin.
Because of an Austrian decree, forbidding the sending of money out of the country, Mrs. Laikin has had difficulty getting the fortune, although a court order awarded her one-fourth as widow, and the rest to her children. To date they have received $45,560, Davis reported.

12th Street Main Service to Start

Use Will Extend North to Center; Street now Is Cleared of Dirt

The new 12th street trunk water line will be put in service to a point at least as far north as Center street within the next week provided weather conditions do not cause serious delays, water officials predicted yesterday. The main is now in use from Rural avenue to Mill street and from Nebraska to Market streets.
Twelfth street had been cleared of dirt from the pipe trenches and the main was in place to a point past Court street on the south unit of the project. Another crew, which has been working northward from Capitol and D streets, has pipe in place as far north as Madison street, on McCoy avenue. The line will run along Portland road from The road north to the highway undercrossing where it will connect with an eight-inch main which extends outside the city limits.
Improved service for the capitol district will be provided by a six-inch main laid from 12th to Capitol on Court street to replace an old four-inch main and connect there with a six-inch line that extends on westward to the business district. A new large main ultimately will be laid westward on State street from 12th to serve in place of a six-inch main now being used.

such delays as are necessitated by conditions to the south. Local trains will run as usual.
The train from California which was to reach Salem at 10:52 Saturday morning is now expected to arrive about 7 or 8 o'clock Sunday morning. The last train arriving from California yesterday was the West Coast, No. 16, which reached here only a few minutes behind its 5:42 a.m. scheduled time.
The northern California slides also impaired Greyhound bus service from the south, officials here said, but by afternoon stages from the south began coming in again. School buses were reported used to make connections through the California trouble area. South-bound buses were scheduled for departures last night and today.

Lovell to Speak For Arts League

With a reciprocal trade agreement in process of negotiation between the United States and England, it is believed that the talk Tuesday night in the fireplace room at the Salem public library by Dr. R. I. Lovell, member of the faculty of Willamette university, on the subject of "America and England," will be particularly timely and appropriate. The talk is sponsored by the Salem Arts league, and is the December offering of that organization for the pleasure and information of the public.
Dr. Lovell has appeared before Salem audiences and is declared to be an interesting speaker. It is said, also, that he is especially well-qualified to discuss the topic under consideration. The program will begin at 8:15 o'clock, and will be preceded by a business session for members only at 7:30 o'clock.
