

Industrials Hit Rallying Wave

Issues of Interest to Army and Navy Show Best Upturns

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Industrial stocks, plotted by Steels, steamed into a wide rally in today's market.

At best gains ran to 4 or more points, although late cashing of profits and a moderate amount of year-end tax selling served to reduce extreme upturns in many cases at the close.

Speculative forces apparently again had the idea government spending will be stepped up on rearmament. Issues which would benefit by army and navy buying were among those exhibiting the greatest strength of the day.

Traders Optimistic
While there was little change for the better in the business scene, most trade observers were inclined to look for at least a moderate turn-about in the lengthy economic reversal shortly after the turn of the year.

Dealings were liveliest in the first hour. The pace tended to slow in subsequent proceedings. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks went up .8 of a point at 4.6. It was the best day's recovery since the early part of the month.

Aircraft Stronger
Strength was exhibited by Aircrafts, coppers, chemicals, farm implements and specialties.

Visible Wheat Supply Drops

As Result Chicago Market Is Strong in Spite of Liverpool Loss

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Responsive to huge curtailment of the United States visible supply, Chicago wheat values particularly overcame today ill effects of unlooked for tumble in Liverpool quotations.

The Liverpool wheat market, although due unchanged to 1/2 cent higher, closed today 1/4 to 2 cents net lower, and temporarily pulled Chicago wheat prices down more than a cent from an early high point.

On the other hand, today's decrease of the United States wheat visible supply totaled 5,297,000 bushels, violently in contrast with 1,900,000 bushels weekly average decrease at this time. There has now been a decrease of 38,828,000 bushels in 12 weeks, as against 16,561,000 bushels decrease during the like period last year.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 3/4 off to 3/4 up compared with Saturday's finish, Dec. 9 1/2-1 1/2, May 9 1/2-1 1/2, July 5 1/2-1 1/2, advanced, May 5 1/2-1 1/2, July 5 1/2-1 1/2, oats at 1/4 decline to 1/4 gain; rye unchanged to 1/4 higher, and provisions showing 10 to 15 cents bulge.

Chicago December wheat showed the best rallying power, reaching a top of 95 cents, up 1/4.

Corn, oats and rye displayed relative strength, helped by further crop export business. Provisions averaged higher with hog values.

back. Silent during the short drive to Millicent's house. But when she was getting out of the car, he said, "Julie, if you marry Dick, you'll be sorry. Some day you'll be sorry you made a mess of everybody's life."

"Everybody doesn't include me, Tommy. I mean to make a success of mine. I've started by minding my own business and minding it well. Suppose you try the same thing?"

"That's what I'm trying to do," he said. But he didn't say it until the big oak door had swallowed her.

"If you marry Dick, you'll be sorry."

CHAPTER VI
Priscilla Allerdyce pressed her freckled nose to the streaming window pane. "It's half past twelve, Julie. There goes Pop Lewis to lunch. You'd better hurry or you won't be dressed."

Julie fastened the collar of her beige crepe and smoothed the folds over her slim hips. She adjusted a chic little toque on her head and replied, "I'm nearly ready. I'll have to wear my old raincoat now. This rain! Damn!"

"Oooh, you said a swear word!" Priscilla was pleasantly shocked. "When you're Dr. Dick's wife, you'd better not talk like that."

"When I'm Dr. Dick's wife, Miss Priscilla Allerdyce, I'll do exactly as I please," Julie informed her.

This important information was lost on Priscilla who pressed her nose even more closely to the glass. "Here comes Tommy!"

"Well, you can let him in. I don't want to see him."

"Can't, I'm going to the bathroom," Priscilla answered conclusively Julie frowned down the stairs.

"Tommy, please don't keep me," she said rather more pointedly than politely when she opened the door. "Millicent is sending Peter for me in a few min."

"Millicent sent me. Peter's busy." He closed the door at his back with a new deliberate movement and stood looking down at her.

"I came to fetch you. Also to ask you to marry me."

"Tommy! I didn't know..."

"I haven't very much now, but when I've finished Law School, I plan to go to the city. Judge Malby has half promised to take me into his firm."

He spoke between thin lips, outlined whitely at the corners. The rigidity of his pose echoed in the cold monotone of his statement.

Julie's eyes changed from grey to green as her look measured him. The softness that had come into her voice at Tommy's words was gone when next she spoke. She spoke slowly and her voice was low but not soft. "I see now! You Jessups are long on sacrifice, aren't you?"

For an instant, meeting his gaze, returning steadiness with steadiness, Julie felt that she heard the clash of steel on steel. Something in her reposed with an exhilaration she had never felt before, all her senses quickening to the challenge. Then it was over and she said, "I'll get my raincoat."

She turned away toward the coat-closet, not trusting her voice to say anything more, not understanding the weakness in her that she was experiencing for the first time, a weakness that she would overcome if she could keep from meeting his eyes again.

He was silent when she came
