Emperor Key to Japanese Policy

Key to Japan's intensely nationalistic and imperialistic policy is the "divinity" ascribed to the emperor. The regard and adoration with which the people of Japan hold their ruler explains the spirit of sacrifice and military zeal characteristic of their efforts to bring glory to the land of the rising sun. The present ruler, Emperor Hirohito, comes from a dynasty which has reigned uninterruptedly for 2,500 years. The worship with which he is regarded contributes greatly to the efforts of Japan's military to bring about what they consider Japan's mission. That is to become mistress of the east and unite the orient into a great empire worthy of their emperor. There is a whole religion bound up with the philosophy with which the Japanese go into battle.
