evidently has a healthy bank roll.

Emil G. Sick, brewery baron who unsnapped the, elastic from a large wad of Uncle Sam's favorite long green to purchase the Seattle Pacific Coast league ball club and franchise, is the fellaof whom we're speaking. Not only did he fork out over a quarter of a million in silky bank notes for the franchise a n d ball park, but Ron Gemmell signed the dough-wholesome name of Sick to some $20,000 worth of checks to waylay howling creditors of the long indebted club. From the publicity bureau of the league comes the following: "Sick is regarded as the biggest asset acquired by the Pacific Coast league in many years." It looks very much like, for the first time in modern history, a publicity exponent has hit the nail squarely on the head and left no glistening splinters. They don't even intimate that Sick may have acquired a heavy liability though.

Financial Smiles.

Says the publicity bureau, "obviously, it was civic pride and love of baseball which prompted Sick to take the baseball helm in Scattle - - - - ". "- - - -he gave that order for a new baseball plant with no more concern or excitement than you or I would show in ordering a platter of ham and eggs." Evidently, the yeast that raises the suds on Sick's beer interests also raises the dough in his bank account. "Fellow club owners and President Tuttle are smiling more broadly than in several years, because Sick's entrance into the game has strengthened the circuit tremendously." Doesnt' every kid grin outright when Santa Claus arrives?

-0-Semi-Pros Start Talk.

While conversing baseballishly, word trickles in from Portland that interest is already looking up for next summer's Oregon semi-pro setup. Even this early it looks as though several district elimination contests will be held for the right to enter the tournament at Silverton in July. Oregon Semi-Pro Commissioner Ray Brooks has had several applications for district commissioner spots. Marshfield was one of the first towns to indicate it would stage a tournament, and Medford, Roseburg, Bend, Pendleton, Baker and LaGrande have all sig-nified the possibility that they may stage such. With the lamp of interest burning this soon, clubs will probably start earlier than they have in the past, assemble stronger lineups, and consequently, the brand of ball played the forthcoming summer will probably be of higher cali-

Salem Sick, or Sick-Less? No mention has been made of Salem in these early baseball mutterings, however. Insofar as we know, there has been no stir of interest here whatsoever. With no park in which to play, even if someone did have the intestinal fertitude to attempt to revive the Salem Senators, summer baseball here appears to be a lost cause. 'Tis rather pitiful that the state capital of the finest state in the union should be without active participation in the great American sport, baseball. At this writing there seems to be only one possible opportunity for Salem to enter the State league this year. That possibility is to arrange with Silverton to play home games there on Sundays the Foxes are away, and let Silverton support the club. Which that athleticminded little city could and would dern near do. Toe bad Salem hasn't a Sick with a wad of kale stuck around somewhere. Trouble is, he wouldn't only have to buy a ball park and ball club, but 17. would also have to buy a whole heck of a lot of interest in it-If you get what we mean.

Oregon Goes Ahead Once, Then Beaver Rally Is Effective Again

CORVALLIS, Ore., Jan. 15-(A) The University of Oregon basketball team, previously undefeated and favored to win the northern division Pacific coast conference title, lost to Oregon State, 36 to 32, tonight before a capacity crowd of 3,500 fans.

Oregon State held a slight advantage throughout the first half, which ended 14 to 13 for the Beavers. Oregon's Lanky basketeers, noted for a hard-running attack and impregnable defense, failed to repeat their 38 to 32 victory, scored at Eugene last Oregon led, 23 to 19, midway in the second half but went down beneath a wild flurry of Oregon State shots. The game was rough, but few fouls were called.

Oregon, hampered by the Beavers' zone defense, handled the ball poorly in the first half. With one minute to go in the second quarter, the score was tied, 13 to 13, when Kebbe tallied a foul shot for Oregon state. of the first four minutes.
