Average Working Man Is Concerned Primarily With Continuity of Job Chisholm of IEU Tells CC Group

SILVERTON—"The same government which 20 years ago helped organize and establish the old 4-L is now, for political expediency deliberately planning and maliciously carrying out its destruction," A. B. Chisholm, president of the Industrial Employees union, (successor to the old 4-L) told 100 members and friends of the chamber of commerce at its Wednesday night dinner meeting.

Chisholm explained the 4L was established by the federal government 20 years ago and was endorsed by President Woodrow Wilson. He explained further that the average working man was chiefly interested in continuity of employment and a satisfactory assurance of income sufficient to keep him and his family. He said these agreements could usually be reached in good understanding between the employer and the employee.

Deplores Loss of Wages He added that it was too bad when agreements couldn't be reached before the whole community was disrupted and the working man was out several weeks' wages. He urged that citizens be not too complaisant when they "see a government board stooping to the dastardly things they have done this past three months. It behooves citizens to realize their personal obligations and responsibilities."

Chisholm said that for the next 90 days the IEU will have its "hands full taking care of and maintaining conditions on an even keel in communities which have supported this organization at all times. Then we'll likely widely expand."

Says in True Line NLA The big CIO and AFL have been continuously sarcastic, the speaker admitted, concerning the little IEU but "when the IEU as little David turns loose at the big Goliath labor organizations, it won't be with a big ball of mud but with a small and effective pellet of patriotism. It won't be the CIO flag leading, it won't be the AFL colors, it won't even be the IEU flag floating over places of business. It will be the American flag as the IEU is the only organization in absolute line with the national labor act," Chisholm said in closing.

Cochran Wallace Cochran and his high school football boys were special guests of the chamber. Cochran gave a brief resume on the football season and introduced the players. L. M. Larson, president of the local IEU, introduced Chisholm.
