set when he found the boat gone, but before he could get another the Hiye Maru sailed for Seattle." Modahl said Partridge told them they had then dumped the dynamite in the river, as the 500-stick bomb was too unwieldy to take to Seattle. They later fashioned the suitcase bomb, containing over 500 sticks of dynamite, which was found floating near the Hiye Maru in Seattle harbor.

The pair took the suitcase bomb to Seattle, checking it on the bus on their trip, and later carrying it on a streetcar to Smith Cove, where the Japanese boat was docked, Modahl said. The explosive used was 50 per cent dynamite, reportedly "lousy" because of its high nitroglycerine content, and the officers commented on the dangerously casual manner in which it was transported.

SEATTLE, Jan. 22. (AP)—The federal grand jury, convening February 1, may be asked to lift evidence in the bizarre bomb plot against the Japanese liner Hiye Maru, federal authorities said today.

They declined to be quoted, however, since it still was, officially, a police affair.

George Partridge, 22, Vancouver, B. C., carpenter's apprentice who revealed the plot, still was held in the city jail without charge, undergoing almost constant grilling by detectives and customs and immigration men.

The drowned body of Rolphe M. Forsyth, 28, former school teacher also of Vancouver, was in the county morgue. It was found near the ship.

Many Filings for Office Predicted

Letters received at the state department during the past few days indicate that a large number of candidates for office at this year's elections would file their declarations within the next two weeks.

There have been less than a dozen filings up to this time, Dave O'Hara, in charge of the elections division of the state department said. The time for filing expires April 4.

"From the letters received up to this time it looks as though the number of filings for the 1938 elections would break all previous records," O'Hara declared.

There already have been two filings for representative in congress from the first congressional district. These include Daisy Barana of Clackamas county and Sheriff Andy Burk of Marion county. Both are democrats.

Spanish Factions Wage Air Battle

HENDAYE, France, at the Spanish Frontier, Jan. 22. (AP)—Government and insurgent airplanes locked today in one of the most intense air battles of the civil war while ground forces fought bitterly on the Teruel front. Civilian centers suffered new bombardments.

Government troops defending their newly won foothold on the lower Aragon front in eastern Spain were reported to have repulsed three infantry attacks on Celadas, about 10 miles from Teruel.

The government reported 1500 insurgent soldiers were lost there. Insurgent columns led by tanks assailed the government fortifications only to be broken and turned back by a withering counter-attack. Earlier, an insurgent commander declared "retiring" government infantry lost 400 dead in the vicinity of Villalabaja and Tortajada between Celadas and Teruel.

Planes carried the war again to civilians far behind the front lines. Many lives were feared lost in a pre-dawn raid on the government's provisional capital, Barcelona.
